ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is to the constant encouragement, criticism and guidance of my supervisor Professor Tapas Majumdar that I owe the completion of this study.

Dr. Anjan Mukherjee helped me with extensive comments, many valuable suggestions, and in the mathematical formulation of some of the arguments. I am also indebted to Dr. Manmohan Lal Agarwal for a number of extremely useful comments on a draft section on the measurability of skill-stocks.

Among many friends who helped me in various ways, I specifically wish to thank N.V. Varghese, Nandita Bhattacharyya, Pradipta Choudhury, Sujata Bhattacharyya and Vijaya Srivastava. Abhijit Banerjee read through the final draft and suggested several improvements. My thanks are also due to Sudhir Malaker for extending his cartographic skill to the drawing of the figures I have used in the study.
B.L. Pahwa deserves my special thanks for typing out the thesis carefully and on time. Above all, but for my friend Dr. Alokesh Barua who never tired of coaxing me into both thought and action, this study would not have seen the light of the day.

None of the aforementioned are, of course, responsible for the shortcomings that still remain in this study.

Finally, I take pleasure in expressing my sincere gratitude to all who made my years in the Jawaharlal Nehru University so pleasant and intellectually so deeply satisfying.
