My sincere thanks and appreciation go to C.J. Daswani, my supervisor and erstwhile colleague for the painful task of reading several drafts of this analysis, often lacking in depth, organisation and style, much of which he kindly supplied.

I am, of course indebted in more significant ways to my teacher Suhas Chatterjee, who has contributed much to the background necessary for successfully realizing this work, and with whom I have worked for a couple of years on almost similar lines. Again I am indebted to my teachers who had shown me the field.

I am grateful to Jim Matisoff, who is always ready to help me out in my problems of analysis as well as books, journals, and other materials; and his continued encouragement in my work.

I stand in equal debt to Paul Benedict, Søren Egerod, Mantaro Hashimoto, Eugenie Henderson, Boyd Michailovsky, Martine Mazaudon, F.K. Lehman, Ben T'sou, for their enthusiasm to help me out, which provided the necessary stimulus to rethink the various issues and sharpened my thought.

My thanks go to DNS Bhatt, Gerard Diffloth, K.H. Gruessner, John Okell, N. Khelchandra Singh, and my colleagues
T.C. Daswani, Anvita Abbi, Kapil Kapoor, Harish Narang, and Santosh Sareen for their co-operation and help.

Finally, I acknowledge the financial support that I realized during the last five years from the University Grants Commission, from a grant for Short Term Project and the Teacher Fellowship under the scheme of Faculty Improvement Programme. I also, thank H. Ranbir Singh, Director, JNU, Centre of Post-Graduate Studies, Imphal and the authorities of the University for the award of the fellowship and for grant of necessary leave.
