ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It would have been impossible to write this thesis without the invaluable support of a number of individuals. First and foremost, I am grateful to my supervisor Dr. Nilika Mehrotra for guiding my research journey which started way back in 2002 when I was working for my M.Phil dissertation. She always inspired me to stay focused and undertake this journey. Her critical comments helped me to tickle my mind a bit more each time, and allowed me to think 'outside of the box'. She engaged in intellectual discussions with me, patiently guided me and I consider myself very fortunate to have got this opportunity to interact with her and learn a lot from her.

I am thankful to my teachers in Jawaharlal Nehru University who clarified my concepts in the course of their stimulating lectures during my M.A. study. I also want to express my gratitude to Prof. Rekha Chowdhury who inspired me to take up this issue of research in 2002. I also wish to acknowledge the indispensable role of my informants who were very hospitable to me when I visited them and spent a considerable amount of time with me during the interview sessions.

It is because of the blessings of my parents and parents-in-law that I wrote this thesis. I am thankful to my parents who showed faith in me and comforted me at times when I needed encouragement. I express my gratitude to my parents-in-law who were very understanding and supported me throughout. I am also thankful to my brother, brother-in-law, sister and sister-in-law. They always helped to pep up my mood especially when I was faced with difficulties.

During the phase of writing the Ph.D. thesis, many of my fellow co-researchers and friends helped me. My friends Shweta, Ananya, Aradhana and Almin proved through their actions that 'a friend in need is a friend in deed' by proof-reading, helping me to make tables or discussing my research with me. I consider myself to be very lucky to be in their company. Sumit, Shubhangi and Lovi were my fellow co-researchers who also proof-read my chapters. Sumit was very kind in giving stylistic suggestions to help improve the presentation of my thesis.

I hold my husband, Siddharth in utmost regard for having backed this intellectual journey. He was always the motivating force behind me and was so considerate that agreed to stay alone in the United States, while I completed my study in India for one and a half years during the writing phase. I will always remember him for his sacrifice throughout my life. Last but not least I am thankful to Siddharth’s maternal grandmother who prayed everyday that I should finish my coursework and join Siddharth as soon as possible.
