ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I have to express my appreciation for all my teachers, in the various institutions I attended, who have with their idealism and sincerity convinced me that it is in knowledge that rectitude rests.

Without Dr. Swaran Singh’s expertise and importantly his patience, this thesis would not have taken the form it has today. Dr. Singh has been very supportive and has facilitated my work and stay in Jawaharlal Nehru University.

The Research Fellowship provided by the University Grants Commission of India supported me during the early part of my thesis-writing years; for this I am truly grateful.

The editing assignment with China Report, due to the timely intervention of Dr. Alka Acharya, supported the latter part of the PhD years. It was helpful more than financially as the long editing sessions with Dr. Acharya, helped me grasp the intricacies of academic writing.

My gratitude to the Graduate Institute of International Studies, Geneva for organising the 2nd Workshop of Young Scholars from the Global South and for providing a perfect platform to get feedback on my thesis. A special thanks to Dr. Maciel Agustin for sparing time to give critical comments on my thesis and for helping me focus on the crucial variables.

The library staff at Jawaharlal Nehru University, Ministry of External Affairs, Parliament and Institute of Defense and Strategic Analysis, were patient and responsive to my demands. I owe a great debt to many friends studying abroad who made access to online journals as easy as the click of the mouse.

I have to express my gratitude towards my parents for their unconditional affection and patience. Without their forbearance, I would not be here. I also wish to thank my siblings and their families for the motivation and support. Lastly and perhaps the most important are the people from my daily life, all my friends for the intellectual stimulation, companionship and the fun which made each day easier and especially Aya, for setting standards and so many other things.

(Satyabrata Sinha)