ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I owe a debt everlasting to Professor R.P. Anand for the constant guidance and encouragement I have received from him ever since the time I joined the International Legal Studies Division, School of International Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University.

I am deeply indebted to Professor Rahmatullah Khan, my guide, who kindled my interest in the subject of international commodity agreements and from whom I have received continual stimulus and unobtrusive kindness. I have greatly benefited from his patient supervision and expert guidance.

I am no less indebted to Dr. V.S. Mani, teacher and friend, who carefully read the manuscript and suggested many valuable amendments. I am thankful to him for the patience he exhibited and exercised.

I am thankful to members of the Secretariat of the International Coffee Organisation (London) and International Cocoa Organisation (London) for taking out time to share their profound thoughts and rich experience with me and helping me get access to important materials.

I acknowledge the valuable assistance I received from the libraries of the Jawaharlal Nehru University, the Indian Society of International Law, the Indian Council of World Affairs, the Peace Palace, the International Coffee Organisation and the International Cocoa Organisation. Special thanks are due to Mr. D.K. Bose of the United Nations Information Centre (New Delhi) for the help I received in tracing relevant documentation.
My thanks also go to all my friends who were a constant source of encouragement over the years.

The completion of this thesis would not have been possible but for the companionship, help and encouragement I received from my wife.

This dream could not have become a reality but for the love, affection, and blessings of my mother.

And lastly, my thanks also go to Mr. S.D.S. Rawat for preparing the typed manuscript.
