ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The preparation of a dissertation of this nature invariably rests upon the assistance, advice and guidance of a large number of friends and agencies. I have to, above all, gratefully acknowledge the help extended by Prof. T.K. Oommen, the Supervisor of this Study, who meticulously went through each chapter. His valuable suggestions made the text lucid and succinct.

Dr. Ehsanul Haq of the Centre for the Study of Social Systems, Jawaharlal Nehru University, and my colleague, Shri Sudheer Michigan of the Department of Social Work, University of Delhi, were very patient in helping me to edit the draft and in weeding out a good deal of linguistic errors. Dr. Ram Sagar Singh of the Centre for Study of Social Systems, Jawaharlal Nehru University, and Dr. Dhorandra of the Centre for Regional Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University were kind enough to take pains in assisting me to process the data and in preparing of qualitative maps for this Study. I gratefully acknowledge their support, advice and assistance. Vandana Singh, my daughter, deserves my special thanks for performing the entire percentage calculations.

I must express my gratitude to the Indian Council of Social Science Research for providing me a contingency grant in 1978-79, and to the Department of Social Work, University of Delhi, for granting me 18 months' study leave in 1978-79.

In Basti District, the help of Shri Ram Murti Singh, District Magistrate and Shri Harbans Sahai, keeper of the English Record Office, was invaluable. They made accessible to me documents which otherwise I may not have been able to procure. The innumerable people of Basti, the local influential - ex-rajbas, zamindars, political leaders and professionals - patiently responded to my persistent queries.

I am thankful to Shri M.L. Khetarpal who has typed this dissertation and has given a final shape for its submission to the University.

As mentioned earlier, a study of this nature is, invariably, influenced by collective efforts and individuals. It may often be too tedious to list out the persons who have contributed to this Study; and their exclusion does not imply lack of gratitude but one hopes that would understand my limitations.

Needless to say, while I acknowledge the assistance extended to me, I alone am responsible for the selection of the substantive problems, logic of inquiry and analysis and presentation of data and also for any shortcomings that may be noticed.
