

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I owe the idea of undertaking a study of the Śukla Yajurveda to Dr. N. J. Shende who guided me in my thesis from 1965 to 1967. Unfortunately for me, he passed away in March 1967 at the height of his research career. If there are any merits in this thesis, I owe them to him who took every pain to assist me in the progress of my work. It is sad, indeed, he is no longer with us to see the final shape of my thesis. His sweet memory will rest with me always.

Subsequently Prof. Dr. G. V. Devasthali guided me in the interim period. In the hands of Dr. C. G. Kashikar the thesis took its final shape.

To all these highly respected Ācāryas, I wish to express my deep sense of gratitude.

I should like to take the opportunity of expressing my gratitude to Prof. Dr. R. N. Dandekar, Director, Centre of Advanced Study in Sanskrit, Poona University, but for whose blessings and encouragement the thesis would not at all have been completed.

I began my study of Sanskrit with Brahmaśrī Medavaram Subrahmanya Sastry, one of the traditional Sanskrit scholars of Andhra Pradesh. Dr. K. Krishnamūrti of Karnatak University, Dharwar, created a deep interest in me for Vedic research. Dr. V. G. Rahurkar, Dr. K. P. Jog and Dr. M.D. Balasubrahmanyam, my colleagues in the Centre of Advanced Study in Sanskrit offered useful suggestions in writing the thesis. The librarians of the Centre of Advanced Study in Sanskrit and the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute have shown their kindness in lending me rare and valuable books. To all these, I offer my grateful thanks.

Finally, I thank Mr. N.G. Phadke for typing the thesis neatly.

Centre of Advanced Study
in Sanskrit

Poona University
POONA-7

4th Sept., 1968.

C. L. Prabhakar
C. L. Prabhakar