Acknowledgements

I doubt if I can express my gratitude in this limited space. I have to admit that I have always been a miser in expressing thankfulness. However, now I would like to say that I truly appreciate all those whose help was so vital to this thesis. First, to those who may not be named here. Some of them encouraged and some even discouraged me. I should confess that all were my real helpers.

The present work is solely due to my guide and supervisor Dr. J. R. Joshi, who, even in his worst condition, encouraged me to complete this work. He suggested improvements, and kindly pointed out errors. When I selected this comparative study of Sanskrit and Pāli, he was the only guide who I could think of. I pay my honour and respect to him with my heart and with full hope for his health to recover.

My gratitude and admiration to Dr. P. G. Lalaye, Chairman of Bhandarkar Institute, and the ex-head of the Dept. of Sanskrit in Osmania University, Hyderabad. While reading the Mahābhārata with him for eight years, I never saw him tired. I could access diverse Indian myths due to him, not only from the Mahābhārata but also from Purāṇas.

Love and thanks to Dr. Madhavi Kolhatkar, who works as a member of Sanskrit Dictionary compilation at Deccan College. She guided me towards a proper understanding of the Rgveda, and also suggested many new thoughts and ideas which could be got only from the original texts.
Gratefulness and thanks to my teacher Meena Harsinghani who assisted me in proof reading. She never showed unwillingness in reading even when she was extremely busy and tired.

To the Korean Buddhist monks and nuns I pay my homage. To my family and my large extended family who are always with me, gladden me, but to whom I always give pain, I dedicate this humble thesis.

And finally, I would like to put on record. One of my challenges has been expressing myself in a language which is quite foreign to me, i.e., English. I do thank the readers of my thesis in advance for making the necessary bridges between my thought and expression at some junctions.

Thank you all.
