Life for me has been so full of things to behold, to share with, and to make sense of, that carving out a dedicated duty-bound hour everyday for something like a thesis is no less than a miracle. This last seven years in JNU, involved with all the multifarious activities, right from the day one has seen me grow as a person and has helped shape my vision for life. What still amazes me is that I was able to work right through it all and now I am able to finish it. Now, when I sit down and acknowledge all the people who have been a part of this endeavour, I find myself re-living a life spent to the brim, associated with students, teachers, academicians, and all the unique people who make JNU what it is.

Words fail me when I think about one person who pushed me, shoved me, stood by me, pointed fingers at me, struck red lines through my drafts and made possible this thesis – my supervisor, Dr. D. Varaprasad Sekhar. Sir, I am truly indebted to you for the indelible influence you have had in my life on things I can remember and more. You will be a part of consciousness all my life.

How can I forget Prof. Madhu Bhalla, who instilled in me the nascent perquisites of academic rigour and discipline during my M.Phil.! The Centre for East Asian Studies has been a family to me and all the teachers have been very helpful, especially, Prof. G. P. Deshpande, Dr. Alka Acharya, and Prof. Srikanth Kondapalli for initiating me into the ABCs of China.

It was a short trip to Beijing and Shanghai, but my interactions with academician there yielded a Chinese perspective to the issues I raise in my thesis. I would particularly like to thank Professors, Wang Yizhou, Song Hong, Ma Jiali and Han Hua at Beijing and Zhao Gancheng, Heng Quan, RenXiao and Xia Liping at Shanghai for their frank and insightful inputs. Venkat was able to pull the strings, arrange the meetings and got me the contacts, in a country where English was a very foreign language.

All said and done, money matters. I am grateful to the Jawaharlal Nehru Memorial Fund for seeing to it that the last one and half years in JNU were spent on my table and not in some desk-pushing pen for a salary. Libraries! Yes! I went there too! And often! JNU, IDSA, DU and NMML are the libraries, which provided much of the brick and mortar for my research.

Brahmaputra! 5 springs! The world shrinks and becomes a microcosm on to itself where cutting across all the divisions, communities form, and a greater sense of camaraderie prevail unlike anywhere I have been at. Starting from tea at Yadavji’s, Paratha at Dahia’s, Maggie at Pramod’s to contending with the enigmatic Sardarji, it is a stage set over and over again everyday with changing casts.

Time stops and life gets a much-needed breather with the laugh riots with Arvind, Pandey, Susant, Alankar, Sambit, Sharma, Shravana, Vikash and Kundan. It has been an immensely enriching association.
Prashant, my constant companion, confidante, has been on the same beat with me through the thick and the thin right through it all. Seven Whole Years!

Chandan and Prabhodan, have become very close associates over the last few years and I will treasure their friendship. Evenings with Palni, Narinder, Kishore, Phool Singh and Arvind (James Bond) will retain their warmth for ever.

The last leg, when a fatigue-ridden me, was about to give up on it all, was salvaged because of Bapujee who made a world of difference. Chandan’s help in formatting and bringing order to the write-ups at the last moment is unforgettable.

And Deepak, Alok, Asit, Guddu, Tulla, Siba...who since then have crossed the wild days of youth and have become successful career-men. This long it has taken! Also Vinayji, whose journalistic forays into JNU have developed into a warm friendship!

At this moment, I would like to remember the love, affection and faith of my parents, Bibu, brothers –Guruje, Swamijee, Prabhujee; and sister, Anubhuti (Chini).

Finally, I remain fully responsible for any omissions and inadequacies in this work.
