ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

"If I have seen further, it is by standing on the shoulders of giants", Sir Isaac Newton once quipped. Needless to state, I will forever remain indebted to my supervisor, Dr Ayesha Kidwai of Jawaharlal Nehru University, and Dr Tanmoy Battacharya of Delhi University for introducing me to syntax by allowing me to stand on their shoulders and have a bird's-eye view of what theoretical linguistics entails.

The writing and completion of this thesis entirely hinged on Ayesha's patience, support and insight for I decided to embark on the programme without a hands-on experience in generative syntax following my first encounter with her. She exercised the tolerance which many of us lack in dealing with novices in careers in which we have been endowed with fearsome genius.

During the 5th GLOW in JNU, SALA in Mysore and SCONLI conferences at Hyderabad and Delhi University as well as LISSIM lectures at Kausani and Mcleod Ganj, I interacted with and benefited from several scholars. In particular, I thank Hilda Koopman, Dominique Sportiche, Andrew Nevins, Veneeta Dayal, Anders Holmberg, Rajesh Bhatt, Peter Svenonious and Ian Roberts, among others, for their various suggestions in respect of my research. However, I hasten to distance these eminent scholars from the flaws in this thesis where the discourse does not reflect their intellect.

My elder brother and mentor, Ezekiel Bonuke, elected to lead an ascetic life to ensure that we do not retire from school for want of fees. This thesis is one of the first fruits of his sacrifice. My younger brothers, namely Fred, Joel and Dennis as well as Henry Kombo of Maseno University offered to become my errand boys in Kenya throughout my stay in India. Dr Larry Kiage also provided me with Bantu stuff gleaned from websites. I am grateful to all of you.

I recall, with appreciation, the concerned faces of the small crowd of relatives and friends led by Ezekiel Oira and my late in-law, Ogega, which assembled at Jomo Kenyatta International Airport in Nairobi on 31st December 2004 to "see" the plane which I would board to India.

Concern by the faculty of the Centre for Linguistics at JNU, notably Professors Anvita Abbi, Vaishna Narang, Pramod Pandey and Harish Narang made feel at home in India. Prof Rahul Roy of the Indian Institute of Statistical Sciences always asked me, "Do you find India hospitable to you?" I thank you all for making it possible for me to adapt to a new research environment.
You and the Hailey Road fraternity in Connaught Place, namely John, Masih, Derald, Shelja, Lakra, Bairagi, Bharti, Ranjan, Mrs Bara, Masakui, Mrs Sailo, Mr & Mrs Biswas, Murmur, Kujur, Soyan, Babie, Romen, Amos, Pran, Ronnie, Alice, Kim, Zetshong, Bob, Cassandra, Gangte, Kimi and Atonmai, among others, made New Delhi a homely place for me.

Although I do not speak Hindi, I felt equally welcome in the company of Samar, Richa, Arpana, Gibu, Mayank, Lalith, Anindita, Hemanga and Anish of JNU, among others, as well as Priyanka, Suranjana, Pinkey, Atreyee, Chandan, Santosh, Khoung, Basantari, Ruchi, Ishani, Hidam, Tani, Shiti and Sneha of Delhi University.

My friends from Africa, all of JNU, namely Charles, Chiputa, Zanzini, Kioli, Feliciter, Joyce, Murimi, Abdi and Galgalo were always available with all manner of help during my stay in JNU. I classify John, Miriam, Peter and Ken of MDU to this group. Many thanks to you.

I am particularly grateful to the Maseno University administration and the entire academic fraternity, my wife (Veronica) and children (Prudence, Bosibori, Sinclair and Bryan) for granting me leave to travel abroad for this onerous task. Prof Allan Bethuel Ogot of the Institute of Research and Postgraduate Studies at Maseno University deserves special mention. He facilitated my nomination for the ICCR fellowship which enabled me to complete this research. Prior to my departure to India, he remarked that I would bring back to Kenya “something good from JNU”.

Many of the grammaticality judgments, especially concerning causatives, applicatives, reflexives and agreement were obtained on phone at ungodly hours from my parents, Bathseba Bosibori and Peter Ongarora. So frequent were my calls that my father once advised me to stick to ‘simple’ constructions since it occurred to him that the Indian(s) I was interacting with seemed to be genuinely interested in learning EkeGusii!

Were it not for the assistance I received from Ashok Chaudhary, Chandan and Rakesh of Munirka Enclave in regard to typing and formatting, perhaps this thesis would not have assumed its current form. Rawatji of the Centre for English also always went out of his way to offer me all sorts of assistance.

To you all and those whose names I am unable to mention here for lack of space, I once again express my appreciation for your contribution towards my successful completion of this programme of study.

Alvida.
New Delhi
16, June 2008

David Ogoti Ongarora