In the recent years, Information Technology has revolutionized the delivery of retail loans and other credit products in urban markets. There is no corresponding improvement in agricultural credit. Why is it that a home loan is easy to get while agricultural credit is full of hassles? Is a uniform credit product for agriculture across the country feasible? These questions prompted me to take up the study in pursuit of my Ph.D.

I would like to acknowledge the encouragement and support that I have received from my guide Dr. V.S. Kaveri, in undertaking the study and writing this thesis. I am grateful to him for accepting to be my guide. He has, with remarkable patience and inimitable style guided me through this endeavor. I admire his tireless energy in going through drafts and help me improve. I also, acknowledge with thanks the immense support and encouragement that I have received from Dr Sanjay Kaptan, Head of the Department of Commerce of Pune University. Dr Kadvekar of Pune University and Dr Ramesha of NIBM Pune have also helped me in the research and my grateful thanks are due to them.

The field work would not have been possible but for the support of Mr. Pokle DDM (NABARD), Mr. Potdar LBO Sangli, Branch Manager and Agricultural officers of Bank of India Sangli, Bank of Baroda Walve, Bank of Maharashtra Tasgaon, State Bank of India, Tasgaon, and DCCB Aastha. Mr. Satish, Mr. Jayaraman, Mrs. Lalitha Venkatesan and many other colleagues in NABARD helped me with data and information. Mr. Bakshi, ED of Bank of Baroda, Mr. Shyamal Acharya, CGM and Mr. Reddy DGM of SBI LHO Mumbai, Mr. Rathod DGM of Bank of Baroda and
Mr. Kapghate AGM Bank of Maharashtra Pune gave support and information. I wish to record my sincere thanks to all of them. I also thank my colleagues in IIBF and friends who supported and encouraged me in this endeavor. I must, most importantly thank the farmers who replied my questionnaires, for they gave me the real insight into the issue.

My wife and daughters tacit support encouraged me in my pursuit. But for their indulgence and good wishes I could not have completed this thesis. Altogether, the research study on Kisan Credit Card has been a very enjoyable and learning journey for me.
