ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

My divine inspirations: Shri Shirdi Sai Baba, Ma Durga and the lord that rules my home state of Maharashtra: Lord Ganesha. Their qualities and the causes that each of these divine figures embodies, have always fascinated me. The Lord Ayyappa temple in Somajiguda Hyderabad. There is a sense of peace and calm that fills me up every time I visit the place. My second innings in India started there, and I will always be grateful to the city of the nawabs that welcomed us into its fold.

My deepest gratitude, to my supervisors Dr Shrikant Kalamkar, for his guidance and support He spent many hours patiently listening to me and wading through a lot of script! Dr. Kalamkar was/is very helpful and his calm attitude during some trying moments is greatly appreciated. Another important aspect that helped us connect on this topic was Dr. Kalamkar’s research interest in the area. Dr. Manju Singh, my co-guide for the project ensured that she provided me with the push that was required to get the ideas flowing from my mind on paper. Dr. Singh’s ability to ‘say it like it is’ made me realize my hitherto undiscovered ability of working at record speed levels! Their combination is like fire and ice: one ensured that I was always on tenterhooks while the other made sure that I continued to believe in the power of positive thinking!

Dr. Rajani Gupte (Vice-Chancellor) of the Symbiosis International University pioneered the Ph. D. program and was/is very helpful: am so grateful for her kind support over the years.

This study would not have been possible without the kind co-operation of Dr. Sudha Kothari and Dr. Medha Samant. Arjunbha Kumbhar of Chaitanya helped me get acquainted with the overall operations of the SHG Federation model. Madam Mandatai Bombale, Padma Bombale and the members of the Vetale and Chimbal SHG cluster. Despite not having ‘much’ in financial terms they opened their homes and hearts for our family inviting us to join the celebrations during important festivals and checking back on the progress of our kids during the school year. They taught me the fine art of nurturing relationships. Thanks to Obama-Singh grant administered by the Indian Institute of Management Bangalore, jointly with the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill for providing partially fund for some work on related aspects of the study.

Mr. S. Sivakumar (ITC) for showing me how to ‘walk the talk’. Mr. Sivakumar’s ability to connect with individuals across ranks, to blend the mainstream commercial approach along with creative base of the pyramid ideas-that actually work in the real world, is something that inspires me. His path breaking ‘E-Choupal’ model that transformed the lives of so many poor farmers- remains a beacon for me. I hope that like him I too, can make that positive difference in the real world.
Dr. Ram Mudambi (Fox School of Business @ Temple University, USA) whom I consider my Guru Dronacharya. Although I have never had the opportunity to study formally under Dr. Ram’s guidance, his immense experience and pointers of practical application of economic theories to my study were very useful. He is a walking repository of research papers and even a few small sessions with Dr Ram were like taking a crash course in economics! Working with him is a treat-since he is able to blend so many topics and transcend the boundaries of scholarly research and fiction –effortlessly. I would like to be as versatile as him and hope that someday I am able to generate research that meets his expectations. Dr. Beth Rose (University of Otago), for her support and encouragement. Beth despite being swamped with a huge review workload and hectic travel schedule was always willing to spare time to discuss my work. Dr. P. D. Jose of IIM Bangalore for his interest in my work. The grant from IIM Bangalore was a big confidence booster as it came at a time when I was working deep in the trenches and going through some trying times.

Father Savio Barretto of the Basilica of Bom Jesus, Goa for keeping us in his thoughts, prayers and for his encouraging words.

My Bramhavidya teachers Shri Barve and Shri Jayant Phadke. Their sessions were very useful particularly since my tryst with Bramhavidya started around the same time as my PhD work. Dr Chinmayee Ratha, who is a foetal medicine expert by training but doubles up as a friend and cheerleader. Her belief in my capabilities makes me want to strive for doing better each time and raising the bar, and hopefully the outcomes. Mr Samarth Dargan and Ms Ashima Sharma for their assistance in making the document look like Cleopatra en papier!

Last and certainly not the least, to my husband Harish Ramchandani and our kids Amit and Tarini. Harish has always been a rock for the entire family and this thesis would not have seen the light of the day without his unequivocal support. Harish and the kids have had to forgo many vacations and outings due to my data collection and writing work –which took a lot of time and which invariably, had to be done during the kid’s vacation time. I vividly remember those days when I used to make daily trips to Vetale beginning my day at 5 am and returning home only past midnight-it was their phone calls and voices that made me endure the rigours of the work and the arduous travel. Amit and Tarini: you made this possible for when I look at both of you I get the motivation to want to ‘live a life’ rather than ‘make a living’. I hope that someday I can make you all proud of me and make up for the past five years of straddling multiple roles and lost time. Harish, for everything: your critical feedback, editing help, endless cups of tea, helping out with the kids and for just being there patiently as I fumbled and fell many times during this process and for helping me get back again–you are the best!
