ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I am grateful to my supervisor who not only aroused my interest on this topic but also theoretically and thematically systematized the author’s field insights of Maithili nationality formation and Maithili movement. Also, his familiarization with the society, culture and politics of Mithila has a corrective impact on the present work. Despite his hectic schedule, he always spared his valuable time to get this work completed within stipulated time-frame. Working under him is perhaps best possible academic exercise, highly motivating and useful for a beginner.

I am also grateful to Professor Rasheeduddin Khan who always persuaded me to work hard to understand the complex process of 'federal nation-building' in a plural society like ours. His life and works have a shaping influence on me.

I am indebted to Kumar Suresh and Satish Kant Thakur for their dialectical scrutinization and estimation of the present work, from their respective specializations on the dynamics of social-formations and cultural traditions of Bihar. Here I cannot restrain myself from recording the valuable cooperation of Nityanand Jha, popularly known as 'Gokulji'. He was instrumental in getting some rare, but extremely useful material on Mithila’s culture, history and society from highly individualized and privatized library tradition of Mithila.

I am also indebted to my parents who have always inspired me to attain the highest possible knowledge in the organic framework of intellectual-making. My wife, despite her chronic illness, has always looked forward to my accomplishments with much empathy and understanding. No less is my daughter Aparajita who constantly reminded me of my Ph.D assignment by uttering "Papa Ph.D. likh rahe ho", even though I was scribing something else.

Among my friends, colleagues and well-wishers, I must specially acknowledge Prof. M.A. Saleem Khan, Prof. A.K. Ray, Mr. M. Rajagopalan Nair, Mr. R.N. Das, Mr. P.J. Anthony, Mr. P.K. Bhatt, Mr. Arshi Khan, Mrs. Sheila Kakkar for their unfailing academic cooperation and encouragement.

I am also thankful to Mr. T.M. Varghese for typing the thesis and A.P. Computers for laser printing and reprography.
