ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

To acknowledge my indebtedness to those who directly or indirectly contributed to the realization of this doctoral dissertation is a most difficult task. In the course of my research, a journey of more than three years of intensive research, I have sought the advice of several scholars, teachers, friends and colleagues, who willingly helped me and also encouraged me. The few names mentioned below symbolically represent all those who have been a source of inspiration for me, and to whom I sincerely wish to express my gratitude for their indispensable assistance and support.

My first and foremost 'Thanks' goes to my guide Dr. Sushma Varma. Dr. Varma was a tremendous source of encouragement to me at the various stages of my historical research. She was my teacher and mentor for my Master's degree and Master of Philosophy degree in History. Whenever I came to a standstill in my historical journey, it was she who illuminated my path. I am therefore, deeply indebted to Dr. Varma for her brilliant suggestions and excellent guidance.

I humbly bow my head in deep gratitude to Dr. M. E. Cherian, the former President of Spicer Memorial College, who is now the President of Southern Asia Division of Seventh-day Adventists. It was he who instilled in me a lifelong spirit to analyze historical facts. He is my first "Guru" in the field of history, who provided the fertile soil on which I started growing as a student of history. I am also indebted to him for granting me sponsorship for this research work.
Words cannot express my gratitude and appreciation to Dr. K. N. Chitnis, the Head of the Department of History, University of Poona, for helping me in selecting the topic for my research. He was always willing to clear my doubts, and his suggestions were of great help towards the completion of this research work.

I wish to record my heartfelt thanks for the generous and valuable assistance of my good friend, Mr. Justus Devadhas, one of the Vice Presidents of Spicer Memorial College. It would have been difficult for me to complete this work if not for his caring and unparallel encouragement.

I am also deeply indebted to Prof. Sheela Patwardhan, the Head of the Department of History, Garware College, for her fervent and earnest encouragement at the different stages of my research work.

I am very thankful to one of my students, R. J. Solomon, for spending long hours with me, proof-reading my research papers. My heartfelt and sincere thanks goes to some of my friends who moved closely with me as I worked on my papers, namely: Mr. J. Sam Prasad, Mr. Kenneth M. Cherian, Mr. S. Solomon, Pastor Antony Devadas, Mr. E. Jacob Simon, Mr. Chacko Paul, and Mrs. Perin Koshy.

In many ways I am deeply obliged to my elder brother, Mr. K. S. Thankachan, who took up the responsibility of educating me when my father expired in 1972, my first year in College. I am also thankful to my elder sister, Mrs. Sosamma Philip, for her caring support and encouragement.

I am deeply indebted to Pastor K. G. George, my father's younger brother, for his encouragement and assistance by giving me some very valuable and rare books, written in Malayalam, from his precious collections. I'd also like to thank my co-brother, Pastor Thomas Mathaikutty, for taking enormous interest in my research and my long discussions with him throughout this work, have proved to be most helpful in many aspects of this research work. I also thank Pastor K. I. Varghese for his encouragement.

For the completion of this work, I am deeply obligated to numerous libraries and archives. My special thanks are for the authorities of the Central Archives, Trivandrum, Trivandrum Public Library, Legislative Library, Trivandrum, Kerala University Library, Trivandrum, and Quilon Public Library. I am also indebted to Prof. K. A. Isaac, Prof. of Library Science, Kerala University, and Shri E. M. S. Namboodiripad, the ex-Chief Minister of Kerala State, for graciously accepting my request for an interview with them.

I am obliged to the Indian Council of Historical Research (ICHR) for the National Scholarship and financial assistance given for this research work.

Grateful appreciation is also extended to my wife, Mrs. Lilykutty Joseph, for proof-reading, typing and retyping the rough manuscripts. I am also thankful to my three little children, Pravin, Swapna and Ranjit, for their many innocent and inquisitive enquiries, which gave me a break from the tedious job of working on my papers. They have always refreshed my mind with new spirit.

My thanks and appreciation is also for Miss Rita Davy, my colleague and the Secretary to the President of Spicer Memorial College, for typing the final copy of my research papers. Her excellent secretarial skills and imaginative transcribing qualities have been an indispensable factor in the essential formation of my research work.

This Paper would be incomplete if I do not pay homage to my first "Guru", Shri Raghavan Nair Asan, under whose guidance I sat to study the first alphabets of the Malayalam language.

And finally as I recollect my memory and think of the initial stages of my education, it was my father and mother who were the moving forces of inspiration. They were my first teachers, and as long as I live, I shall forever remain indebted to them for being such wonderful parents. And because they have suffered and sacrificed their lives for the family, and especially for me, I wish to dedicate this doctoral dissertation to them, my beloved parents.
