PREFACE

This research study has been made for Ph. D. Degree in Law of North Bengal University. In this study, a sincere attempt has been made to analyze emerging legislative, executive and judicial trends in curbing corruption in India commencing from pre-independence period, post independence period including up-to-date scenario.

Corruption is opposed to democracy and social order. It also affects national economy and cultural heritage of India. Cause of corruption depends upon socio economic factors and disparity amongst different classes of people. Lack of awareness belonging to different classes of people and fear has led to the birth of corruption.

Due to technological and scientific development, the demand of people has reached to sky limit. The greatest barrier to development is massive corruption and it is not limited to a particular country but its magnitude differs from country to country. Keeping in view of gravity and quantum of corruption, researcher has expressed deep anguish and highlighted his thought in his thesis.

The researcher is indebted to a number of intellectual people without whose help the present research study would have been incomplete. At the very outset, the researcher would like express his gratitude and convey thanks towards his supervisor, Dr. Rathin Bandyopadhyay Associate Professor of Law, North Bengal University, under whose sincere guidance, this research study has been carried out. Besides, the author got inspiration and courage from some other respected Professors within and outside of the State.

I am also highly indebted to Professor Gangotri Chakraborty and Professor Bishnu Prasad Dwivedi, Department of Law, North Bengal University since I have got valuable guidance from them. The staff of Library of Department of Law,
North Bengal University, National Library Kolkata, Indian Law Institute, New Delhi, Indian Institute of Public Administration, New Delhi, Indian Society of International Law, New Delhi, Indian Council for Social Science and Research, New Delhi, National Human Right Commission, New Delhi, need special mention for their active co-operation.

I also acknowledge co-operation from Sri Suman Chakraborty, my son and Sri Somnath Ganguly, my nephew who helped computer related works in connection with this research study.

Last but not the least, the researcher would like to convey gratitude to his wife Smt. Sima Chakraborty for taking every pain and also sincerely acknowledge that without whose help and co-operation, this research study would have not been in the present shape.

SRI ALOKE KUMAR CHAKRABORTY

North Bengal University

2 ( ) 9 2011.