Acknowledgements

The completion of this doctoral thesis could not have been possible without the persistent guidance of my supervisor Professor Sabyasachi Bhattacharya. His detailed and critical comments as also his thoughtful suggestions at each and every stage of the study over the past few years have indeed enriched my experience with historical research in many more than just one way.

I am also indebted to Dr. Neeladri Bhattacharya for generously helping me in the administrative and academic matters of the University, particularly during the last phase of the thesis.

I have benefited a great deal from my discussions, at various stages of my research, with Professors Amalendu Guha, K.N. Chowdhury, Pramit Chaudhury, Tapas Majumdar and Surendra J. Patel. Amongst many friends and colleagues who, as always, helped in clearing doubts and forming new ideas, I would like to particularly mention Prabhu Prasad Mohapatra. Interactions with Dr. Timothy Dyson, Dr. Peter Xenos and my workshop co-participants in the Population Seminar of the East-West Population Institute at Honolulu in June 1992 helped me strengthen some of the ideas incorporated in the thesis.
To Pradipta Chaudhury I am particularly thankful for long discussions over matters of data and construction of tables. My other friends Arunachalam Dharmalingam and Sunitha Raju had taken keen interest in the construction of the graphs. Last but not the least, I owe special thanks to Shormila Mukherji for her help with the neat computer-arrangement of my bibliography.

I have been extremely fortunate in getting sponsorships of one kind or the other from institutions like the Indian Council of Social Science Research, New Delhi, the Institute of Development Studies, Sussex, and the East-West Center, Honolulu at various stages of my research. Along with these, I would also like to put on record my gratitude to the helpful staffs of various libraries and archival depositories, mainly the Sussex University library at Falmer, the School of Oriental and African Studies library and the India Office Library at London, the University of Hawaii library at Honolulu, the National Archives of India, the Central Secretariat Library, the Nehru Memorial Museum and Library and the Indian Council of Agricultural Research library at New Delhi, the State Archives of Assam at Dispur and, of course, the Jawaharlal Nehru University library.
Rajagopal's efficient typing of the drafts as well as the final version of my chapters has been also meticulously perfect. I take this opportunity to express my sincerest thanks to him for his help and cooperation.

I am of course solely responsible for all the errors, omissions and gaps still remaining in the thesis.

Finally, I take pleasure in acknowledging all the support and encouragement I received from my close friends, well wishers and my family without which my work and stay at the University could not have possibly been any more memorable and satisfying.

New Delhi
July 1992

Nandita Khadria

Nandita Khadria