ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I take the opportunity to acknowledge my sincere sense of gratitude to all those who helped me directly or indirectly to the completion of this thesis.

The first and foremost gratitude I owe, is to Dr. D. K. Garde, my guide, for his meticulous planning of this type of study and the methodical guidance which made this work possible. He has helped me in various ways. His thoughtful suggestions, valuable criticisms and, above all, his continuous support and interest always remained to me the constant sources of inspiration and encouragement.

I also thank all my teachers and friends of the Politics and Public Administration Department of the Poona University for their kind co-operation and help.

My thanks are also due to the Librarian and the staff of the Jayakar Library of the Poona University who had helped me considerably with reference services of a high order.

I also express my sincere thanks to the University Grants Commission for providing me a research fellowship for the period of 1969-72.
