ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

As I recall my dream to do a PhD, I go back to my days in high school in 1979-80 when my father was pursuing his doctorate. His example and inspiration gave me something to dream about. But dreams do not fructify just like that. I knocked on several doors and went through many hurdles to get here. The Lord’s great provision sustained me and let that dream mature. The germ of the idea for my thesis came during a homily sometime in 1999. My first thanks are due then to Jesus Christ in whom are hidden all treasures of knowledge and wisdom.

Sheer fortune gave me an outstanding philosopher as Research Guide. The internationally acclaimed teacher and author, Fr. Dr. Kurian Kachappilly CMI, set the pace for my research. His erudite, critical approach removed conceptual flaws and helped develop my fledgling ideas. His pleasant demeanor made things easier and I was given plenty of liberty to work at my pace. I thank him for being considerate.

I have been singularly fortunate to have a great man of God as my Spiritual Guide. Fr. Dr. B. Joseph Francis, Emeritus Professor of Philosophy and Theology at St. Peter’s Pontifical Institute, taught me many lessons over the past 16 years. He gave me of his insight freely and generously. Countless are the sessions when we would confabulate upon ideas. I can never thank him enough for everything he has been for me.

Eight people have been particularly helpful with my research. Fr. Dr. Xavier Manavath CMF helped me understand certain nebulous concepts and pointed towards helpful references, besides reading my manuscripts. Fr. Dr. Saju Chackalackal CMI and Prof. Srikanta Swamy enlightened me on the fundamental aspects of doing research. Prof. Tony Sam George was very accessible as Director of the Centre for Research. Mr. James Kurian helped with coordinating matters. Mr. Mathew
Alexander sent rare books from USA. Mr. Selvakumar Johnson helped with sourcing literature from the internet. Col S.D. Roy trekked up and down many libraries looking for books I needed. My bosom friend from school, Mr. Arul Prakash George, vetted my articles.

We all need role models, and mine was my father, Mathulla, first for boundless patience, and then, for his earthy wisdom. I am also fortunate to have my mother, Baby, who is a joy to be around. Being an accomplished educationist, her perspectives were rich and relevant to the subject I was venturing with. Her soothing words were a balm during those wearying hours of labor. My profound thanks go to my parents who have shown me the way forward through their exemplary lives.

My true friend and wife, Rose, with her simple verities and heart full of love, gave me much more than I could have asked for. Her support and prayers helped lighten my burden; I could not have done it without her. I’ve also been nourished by the tender love of my children, Teresa and Mathew, who kept me going with their laughter and diversionary games. My dear sister, Alice, who is an experienced researcher, contributed where it mattered most. I also thank Shannon, Sarayu and Sasha, for their love and affection. Mr. Sunil, Mr. Babu and Mr. Jacob, helped sharpen the presentation. I thank the Lord for the priceless gift of my family and the entire group of Impactors for affording me peace and the presence of mind while at research. My profound thanks are due also to Mrs. Annie John for holding my cause in prayer all these years.

All people here have touched and shaped my dream and enabled its fruition. May that fruit serve the cause of education even if in a small way.
