

Table of Contents

		Page Number
	Declaration of the Researcher	i
	Certificate of the Research Guide	ii
	Acknowledgement	iii
	Abstract	1
Chapter I	Introduction	15
1.1	Introduction to the research question	15
1.2	Product and place relationship	19
1.3	The Product	21
1.4	The Price	22
1.5	The Promotion	23
1.6	The Place	26
1.7	History of automobiles	27
1.8	History of automobiles in India	29

	1.9	Time line of the Indian automobile industry	36
	1.10	Justification of the purpose of the Study	37
Chapter II
		Literature Review	40
	2.1	Distribution channels	41
	2.2	Difference between physical distribution and the channels of distribution	44
	2.3	Why dealers/distributors are required	44
	2.4	Channel-masters	47
	2.5	Market coverage strategy	47
	2.6	Product–distribution channels relationship	48
	2.7	The Pull and Push strategy of marketing channels	50
	2.8	The number of distributors in the given market.	51
	2.9	Qualities of the channel members	52
	2.10	Conflict and competition among the channel members	53

	2.11	Automobile Industry in India	54
	2.12	Emerging channels of distribution in automobile industry	57
Chapter III		The Objectives, Research Methodology, Hypotheses and Data Analysis tools of the Study	62
	3.1	Introduction to research problem	62
	3.2	Objectives of the Study	63
	3.3	Research method consideration	64
	3.4	Questionnaire as the tool for data collection	66
	3.5	Data collection	69
	3.6	Hypotheses of the Study	71
	3.7	Data analysis	72
Chapter IV		Profile of the passenger vehicles manufacturers in Pune region	75
	4.1	Channels of distribution employed by the manufacturers in Pune region	76

4.2	Number of dealers	77
4.3	Exclusivity of the dealers	79
4.4	Factors taken into consideration while deciding the need of a dealer	80
4.5	Selection procedure of the dealers	82
4.6	Preferences for dealer's premises	84
4.7	Profile of a dealer	85
4.8	Minimum investments and infrastructure expected to be made by the dealers	86
4.9	Functions of dealers	87
4.10	How presence of the dealers help manufacturers	88
4.11	Supply of vehicles to the dealers	89
4.12	Inventory maintained by the dealers	90
4.13	Financial support	90
4.14	Targets for the dealers	91

4.15	Involvement of dealers in launch of new models of vehicles and training the dealers	92
4.16	Dealers' satisfaction	93
4.17	Relationship with the dealers	95
4.18	Strategic location of the dealers	96
4.19	Optimal number of dealers	97
4.20	Increase in number of dealers	99
4.21	Decrease in the number of dealers	100
4.22	Plans to change present channels of distribution	101
4.23	Idea about new channel of distribution	102
Chapter V	Profile of the dealers in Pune region	104
5.1	The number and the location of the dealers in Pune Region	104
5.2	Exclusiveness of the dealers	105

5.3	Type of business concern of the passenger vehicles dealers in Pune region	109
5.4	Person in charge of the showroom	113
5.5	Average time spent by the person in charge of the showroom in the activities of the showroom	115
5.6	Earlier profession if any of the passenger vehicles dealers in Pune region	115
5.7	Reasons for taking up the dealership	117
5.8	Ownership status of the premises of the dealership in Pune region	118
5.9	Minimum and maximum area of the dealer's premises	120
5.10	Work force purely on the commission paid basis	120
5.11	Support from the manufacturers in the initial stages of the dealership	121

5.12	Customer satisfaction programmes	122
5.13	Participation in training programmes conducted by the manufacturers	131
5.14	Satisfaction level of the dealers with their manufacturers	135
5.15	Redress of complaints and grievances	136
5.16	Business competitors	136
5.17	State of mind of a dealer when a new dealer is appointed in the city/ town where the dealer is present	138
5.18	Relationship: The best term to describe the relationship between the manufactures and their dealers	140
5.19	Idea of selling the vehicles under the same roof	142

Chapter VI	Findings of the Study	144
6.1	Comprehensive study of present channels of distribution	144
6.2	Factors taken into consideration by the manufacturers while deciding the need of a dealer in a city or town	159
6.3	Association between the number of dealers of each manufacturer and the sale of vehicles	162
6.4	Association between the location of the dealer and effective functioning of the dealers	164
Chapter VII	Hypotheses Validation	175
7.1	Hypothesis: The present distribution channels design does not seem to be helping the manufacturers in sales	175
7.2	Hypothesis: The automobile manufacturers seem to be planning to change their present channels of distribution	178

7.3	Hypothesis: There may not be any association between the number of dealers of each manufacturer and the sales.	180
Chapter VIII	Suggestions	182
8.1	The manufacturers should motivate the dealers to participate in the training programmes	182
8.2	The satisfaction level of the dealers with the manufacturers should be monitored as it is associated with the sales	188
8.3	Number of dealers of each manufacturer	194
8.4	Suggestions for alternative channels of distribution	196
8.5	The increase in the sale of vehicles may be achieved by increasing the number of employees in the service department	206

Chapter IX Limitations, extent and scope for further research

9.1	Geographical limitations	210
9.2	Time constraint	211
9.3	Limitation of 'the automobile industry' involved in the Study	211
9.4	Limitations of research methodology	212
9.5	Data analysis constraints	213
9.6	Limitations of the statistical models developed	213
9.7	Extent of the Study	213
9.8	Scope for further research	214

Appendices

Appendix A	List of 2-wheeler manufacturers and their dealers in Pune region.	217
-------------------	---	-----

Appendix B	List of 4-wheeler manufacturers and their dealers in Pune region.	226
Appendix C	Schematic representation of the Pune region	239
Appendix D	Copy of the pilot questionnaire for the dealers	242
Appendix E	Copy of the Questionnaire for the manufacturers	248
Appendix F	Copy of the Questionnaire for the dealers	258
Appendix G	Sample application form for automobile dealership	267
Appendix H	Sample customer qualifying card	285
	Bibliography	288