Acknowledgements

When I started on this study, little did I realise the scale of the work that I had embarked upon. Since that time it has been a long and complex process requiring not only knowledge but also faith, luck and moral support. There are many who have helped me along the way and I owe much to the different people who have contributed in different ways to the completion of this work.

My thanks are due, first and foremost, to my supervisor Professor G. K. Chadha, for his unstinting support and constant encouragement. His generosity of knowledge, experience and ideas has made it possible for this work to see the light of the day and I wish to record my deepest gratitude to him.

I am also deeply grateful to Professor K. L. Krishna, Delhi School of Economics, University of Delhi, for his feedback and critical comments during the early stages of this work. I am indebted to Dr. Hiranya Mukhopadhyay, National Institute of Public Finance and Policy, New Delhi, for his help and valuable suggestions. I also remain grateful to Dr. Arindam Banik, International Management Institute, New Delhi, for providing me valuable references and insightful comments.

Thanks are due to Dr. Paul Dorosh, Chief of Party, International Food Policy Research Institute, Dhaka, for letting me have access to essential data and academic papers during my research trips to Bangladesh. I am also indebted to thank Dr. Quazi Shahabuddin, Bangladesh Institute of Development Studies, Dhaka, for sharing his thoughts on the topic.
Special thanks to Dr. Raisuddin Ahmed, International Food Policy Research Institute, Washington, D. C. for his valuable feedback and suggestions. And to Mr. K. M. Akbar of the World Food Programme, who not only helped me out in Dhaka, but also took the time to send me data over email.

I was fortunate to have the support of the University Grants Commission, Government of India, which provided me with a research fellowship for completing the study. I would also like to acknowledge the help and cooperation that I received from the Commission for Agricultural Costs and Prices, Ministry of Agriculture, Government of India.

To my friends – Beena, Bhishma, Dipa, Kuldip, Paromita, Partha, Rajarshi, Richa, Simanti, Sohail, Som Shankar, Sunita, Vijay and Zareen – thanks for all the help rendered in various ways. Specially, Richa who took the pains to proof-read my work.

Finally, I feel gratitude beyond what I can articulate to my family for their constant love and support. And to my sisters, Suraiya and Kohinoor, for their help with the copyediting and the many tables during the last stretch of writing.

Needless to mention, any errors or shortcomings that may remain are my responsibility.

August 2000.

Firdousi Naher