ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I feel it necessary to specially thank three sets of people.

First, Professor D. R. Gadgil and Professor N.V. Sovani of the Gokhale Institute of Politics and Economics, who are responsible for my academic training and who have supported my efforts in various effective ways.

Secondly, the large number of businessmen, secretaries of associations etc. who helped me to collect the information here presented and who are too numerous to mention individually.

Thirdly, various librarians and Shri N.G. Phadke, who has typed this thesis.

Gokhale Institute of Politics and Economics, 4th April, 1956