STATUS OF SALT WORK IN TUTICORIN

R. Sumathi

Common salt is chemically known as sodium chloride. The main source of manufacture of common salt is sea brine. The other sources are lake brine, sub-brine and rock salt. The process involves fractional crystallisation of salt present in the brine using solar energy. The chemicals that usually interfere in the manufacture of common salt such as Calcium Carbonate, Calcium Sulphate, Magnesium Sulphate, Pottasium Chloride, Magnesium Chloride, Magesnesium Bromide, Sodium Sulphate, Sodium Carbonate.

As such, the purity of common salt depends on the presence of other interfering salts to the desired minimum as per the standards fixed by Indian standard institution (ISI) in consultation with all concerned in the manufacture and use of common salt for edible as well as industrial purpose in the country.

In maintaining the purity of common salt to the desired standards, the ways and means of enforcing quality control plays an important role. Normally, there are two ways, the central one is process quality control in the field and the second one is analytical control in the laboratories. The two methods are followed in the salt work in Tuticorin.
