In this additional part of my Ph.D. Thesis entitled 'Motifs on Early Medieval Indigenous coins of Northern India (C. 600 - 1200 A.D.) an attempt has been made to find out some reasonable causes of continuity of various coin-types for a period of long time and then I have given a brief geographical and chronological accounts of the early medieval coin-types. However, in order to understand a proper conception about it I have provided a geographical and chronological table of various types of the early medieval issues. This part of my thesis has also appended a broad chronological chart, a list of illustrations, two maps, and six plates.

I would simply assert that the present dissertation offers at the present time a systematic study on the subject from the historical point of view. I may hasten to acknowledge that it has been possible for me to give it much a complete form only being able to utilize properly the results of the previous researches in the field, which is enormous as well as diverse.
