ACKNOWLEDGMENT

From the inception of the idea to study the marketing of tourism industry in Bangladesh to the time of my submission of this thesis, I have received help from many people and institutions. Though I express my deep feelings and gratitude to all of them, I am not listing all their names individually. But I must mention a few names whose help and cooperation have been of immense helpful to me.

First and foremost, I express my sincere respect and profound gratitude to my supervisor, Dr. A. V. Raman. His constant advice, guidance and direction have been of immense value to me both in respect of this work and my status as a foreign student in Pune. The enlightened discussions I had with him many times helped a lot in translating my thoughts and ideas systematically. I had also the privilege of receiving helpful comments and necessary corrections from him regarding the various issues dealt with in this thesis. In spite of his busy schedule, he patiently spared much of his valuable time to me and my work. Otherwise, it would not have been possible for me to complete this work. It was indeed my good fortune to have had such an able and devoted guide as Dr. Raman.

I am indebted to Dr. S. L. Joshi, Professor and Head, Department of Commerce and Management Sciences, University of Pune, for his kind cooperation in all respects during the period of my study.

It was my privilege to work at the Indian Institute of Cost and Management Studies & Research (INDSEARCH), Pune, for this thesis. I have extensively used their library and other facilities. I take this opportunity to express my gratitude to Dr. Ashok Joshi, Director, INDSEARCH, and faculty, Librarian and administrative staff of INDSEARCH for their cooperation and encouragement.

I owe my indebtedness to my colleagues namely Dr. Syed Rashidual Hasan and Mr. A.B.M. Shahidul Islam, Professor and Assistant Professor respectively, Department of Marketing, University of Dhaka, who had spared their valuable time in discussing various issues concerning the subject. I must express my sincere gratitude to Dr. Baqui Khalily, Professor of Finance and Banking, University of Dhaka, for his unlimited help. During the course of this study, I had also discussed with many others working in this field in Bangladesh and shared my ideas with them. Their directions, experiences and written materials on the subject had been very much helpful in giving the insights into the problems and steer the thesis appropriately.

I can not forget the Government of India for their financial assistance and the Dhaka University authority for granting me leave of absence to complete the study.

My sincere thanks are also due to Mr. Delower Hossain who has borne the pains of typing the thesis.

Finally, I am extremely grateful to my father, wife and daughters who bravely put up with the separation during my study period.

I need to add that none of the above is responsible for the omissions and commissions that might be found in this work for which I take the full responsibility.

Md. Afjal Hossain
