ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The author expresses his deepest sense of gratitude to his teacher Dr. R.C. Das, Principal, Bureau of Educational and Psychological Research, Govt. of West Bengal, Calcutta, for his inspiring guidance and training, generous help and affectionate encouragement. Actually, the present research was started in the year 1964. But under pressure of circumstances it had to be abandoned like an almost sunken ship. At that moment of despair Dr. Das came to its rescue and took the stewardship of almost a lost case. The wind blew and the sails were lifted. The ship reached its destination.

The initiation of the present author in research work was held under Dr. J.C. Das Gupta, the then Principal, David Hare Training College, Govt. of West Bengal, Calcutta. The author had the privilege of getting experience for the first time in research work while he worked as a Research Assistant under Dr. Das Gupta in a research project on personality during the years 1962 to 1964. In the present work the 'Calcutta Personality Inventory' of Dr. Das Gupta was used as one of the tools. Dr. Das Gupta was kind enough in allowing him to use his questionnaire. The author owes a great debt of gratitude to Dr. Das Gupta for all that he has done for him.
The author's heart felt thanks will go to Dr. R.G. Chatterjee, Professor and Head of the Department of Psychology, University of Calcutta, for offering him all facilities to undergo a course of practical training in experimental Psychology in his laboratory which has undoubtedly helped the author a lot in his present work.

The author feels obliged to Dr. Sreemati Maya Mukherjee, Assistant Professor, Bureau of Educational and Psychological Research, Govt. of West Bengal, Calcutta for the hardship she took in teaching him the technicalities of the Rorschach Science. Her generosity and able teaching made the learning easy.

In a research work in the field of social science collection of data constitutes a vital part. At the same time it is also the most difficult part of the work. It is the foundation upon which stands the edifice of the whole work. From this respect each subject, who supplied data, is a part and parcel of the whole theme. The author records his sincere gratitude to all the orphan and family children who took the psychological tests and participated in this investigation with a sense of joy and spirit of co-operation. The author is also very much thankful to the authorities of the organisations and schools which gave him every facility to work among the children under their charge.

The author has to thank Sri Shasanka Bagchi, Assistant Librarian, Bureau of Educational & Psychological Research, Govt. of West Bengal, Calcutta, for the help he (the author) received from him in finding out the books and journals relevant to the work. Sri Bagchi helped him ably with the right spirit of a Librarian which made the work smooth and easy.

Thanks are due to Sreemati Manju Chakraborty, Lecturer in Statistics, Bureau of Educational and Psychological Research, Calcutta for her valuable help and suggestions in statistical computation of the data.

In a research work the words of inspiration from elders and superiors are very much valuable especially in the moments of stagnation. This shows light in darkness. The author expresses his feeling of gratitude to Professor Dr. T.C. Sinha, former President, Indian Psychoanalytical Society and Dr. D.N. Nandi, Professor and Head of the Department of Psychological Medicine, University of Calcutta and President, Indian Psychoanalytical Society, for the inspiration they gave to him from time to time in carrying out the work. Their occasional enquiry about the progress of the work enthused the author and kept him alert. Blessings of well wishers like them were a source of constant encouragement and inspiration.

The author's indebtedness to the writers of the books and articles in this field is obviously not little. Particularly the works of Dr. John Bowlby inspired him to a very great extent.
The author's friends Sreemati Kamala Sen Gupta, Dr. Dilip Guha, Dr. G.C. Boral, Sri Swaraj Sarker, Sri Sankar Ghosh and Sri Sunil Basu, his brothers-in-law, Dr. Ajoy Basak and Sri Amit Basak, and his brothers Sri Samar Basu and Sri Arun Basu, all helped him in materialising the present work in innumerable ways. Many other friends and wellwishers also extended their helping hands. The authors takes the privilege here to acknowledge his warmest sense of gratitude to them all.

Finally, the author expresses his indebtedness to his wife, Dipali, for her constant help and assistance in the work. She had to curtail her leisure considerably and take a lot of pains for bringing this work to its completion.
