ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

As this thesis, 'Industrial Relations in Ancient India', is made ready for submission, I consider it my pleasant duty to put on record the help and encouragement I received from various persons and institutions.

By completing this thesis I fulfill a pledge to the memory of my teacher and supervisor Sisir Kumar Mitra who never saw the thesis in finished form due to his untimely death. I fondly remember how much interest and enthusiasm he took for my research, even when his health was failing. No words can express my debt and gratitude to him.

The death of my supervisor could have brought an end to my academic pursuits. That it was not so, goes largely to the credit of Dr. H.N. Bhattacharyya, Lecturer, Department of Ancient Indian History and Culture, Calcutta University, who was extremely kind and generous to agree to be my research guide. He ungrudgingly bore all the troubles of supervising this thesis and his valuable suggestions were of great help for me.

I don't find any language to express my sense of gratitude to Dr. B.N. Mukherjee, Carmichael Professor, Department of Ancient Indian History and Culture, Calcutta University, and Dr. Ranabir Chakravorty of Burdwan University. Without their help and encouragement my thesis would have remained a dream never materialised.

I am grateful to Sri Jasimi Ganguly who has typed out the manuscript within a very short time.

I am also indebted to the authorities and library staff of the Asiatic Society, Calcutta, the National Library, Calcutta and the Central Library, Calcutta University.