ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

'MORPHOLOGY OF BENGALI AND TAMIL LANGUAGE—a CONTRASTIVE STUDY' is the outcome of long five years of research in the Department of Tamil Studies, University of Calcutta from 2003-2008.

A number of linguistic studies have so far been made by different scholars in the field of Bengali and Tamil languages separately. But the exact relationship between Bengali and Tamil on the basis of structural similarities and differences has not yet been studied.

In the present research work have not described all the structural aspects of the two languages, but demonstrated the verb morphologies only and then given a contrastive analysis of the similarities and the differences of the verb morphologies of both the languages.

The successful completion of this research work would not have been possible without active, unsparing and painstaking guidance of my teacher Dr. Sukla Chakrabarti, Reader & Head, Department of Tamil Studies, University of Calcutta. I am grateful to Dr. Subhadra Kumar Sen Ex-Professor, Department of Linguistics, University of Calcutta for his constant encouragement. I convey my heartfelt thanks to both of them, my respected teachers.

I also convey my thanks to Mr. Manasranjan Dutta, my daughter Sanskrita Ghosh & typing friends for their co-operation in the thesis.

I extend my thanks to all of them whose inspiration enthused me to take and complete this strenuous work.
