Cowper wrote; "Oars alone can ne'er prevail to reach the distant coast: the breath of heaven must swell the sail or all the toil is lost."

I praise and glorify the name of Allah that He has enabled me to complete this manuscript systematically, enabled me to explore and bring joy to my inner life.

In my quest to complete this work I owe gratitude to many. My deepest appreciation for Dr Usha Ram, my guide who has shown confidence and trust in me. Her guidance and timely remarks have helped me improve my work. She is the most gentle, and kind-hearted human being I know.

Words cannot express how much I owe to both my families without whose unflinching support this work would never have been possible, they have lightened all my responsibilities, and often taken great personal trouble themselves to ensure the completion of this project.

My dear husband, Saif, has been by my side right from the start, been my inner source of strength, encouraging and helping in every possible way, I am grateful he is a part of my life.

I would like to extend my appreciation to Dr Shejwal, for his guidance in statistics, Dr Lodhi and Dr Wadkar for their best wishes and support, and the rest of the staff at the department for always being helpful. I also thank the university library for allowing me access to their unlimited sources of knowledge.

My close friend and colleague Megha Deuskar has always offered me a shoulder to lean whenever I needed it, she has helped and guided me in more ways than one. I also thank my other colleagues in the department who have helped in all ways great and small. My special thanks to all department heads and principals for their cooperation and permission to let me collect data from their students.

KEM Hospital's Psychiatry department, especially Dr Paralikar, Dr Chaugule, Dr Panchnadikar have very enthusiastically shared their opinions and supported me in my work. Many thanks to all of them.

Psychology is very dear to my heart. I hope I am able to progress further in my quest for knowledge: this is just a beginning!
