ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I express my sincere gratitude to my research supervisor, Prof. M. Kodanda Rao, of the Department of Anthropology for his valuable guidance in preparation of this thesis. But for his affectionate encouragement, I could not have completed this work.

I am also grateful to Prof. Ratna Naidu and Prof. G.S. Aurora, who as the Heads of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology and also as Deans of School of Social Sciences, were sympathetic to me and extended all possible help whenever I approached them.

All the faculty members in the Department of Anthropology and Prof. Nagaraju (Department of History) deserve a special mention for their valuable suggestions at different stages of this work. I will be failing in my duty if I do not acknowledge the help and support I received from several faculty members in the School of Social Sciences, University of Hyderabad. My special thanks are also due to Dr. Lakshmi Narayana of the Department of Sociology and to Prof. Ramakrishna, who have been a source of constant encouragement.

During the final stages of this work, Mrs.(Dr) Kodanda Rao and his daughters have ungrudgingly endured with many an inconvenience caused to them. I am thankful to them.
All the Government Officials in different departments in Seethampeta Block of Srikakulam district, Andhra Pradesh were very helpful during my field work. Similarly, I received immense help from Brother Mathews and other members associated with the Voluntary Organisation in Manapuram village. I cannot express my gratitude to them by words.

The Savara of the study villages, particularly Manapuram, extended all cooperation during my stay with them. They treated me with great love and affection. I profusely thank them.

Mr. Balakrishna, Mr. Madhusudan Reddy, and Mr. Sai obliged my friendly demands for their secretarial help while preparing the drafts and also the final report. I am grateful to them.

The work of this nature would not have been completed, but for the help rendered by many of my acquaintances and friends, whom I could not individually acknowledge.

Finally, I am grateful to the University of Hyderabad and the University Grants Commission for awarding me Junior and Senior Research Fellowships which enabled me to undertake this study.
