ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many of my teachers and friends generously offered their material, moral and intellectual help in the making of this thesis. Acknowledging all the friends would not be possible, for the list would be an indefinitely prolonged appendix to the work. Therefore, I express my gratitude here especially to those whom I have overburdened with my personal, financial and professional problems.

My supervisor Prof. Bipan Chandra, with his warm encouragement helped me to come out of my several inhibitions, hesitations and problems of articulation. Despite his heavily packed schedules, he gave a patient hearing to my arguments. With continuous discussions and ruthless criticism he helped me to recognise several pitfalls and formulate my arguments much more sharply and accurately. I am deeply indebted to my supervisor both personally and professionally.

Prof. K.N. Panikkar helped me in taking up the right questions in dealing with cultural, ideological and intellectual aspects of the national liberation struggle. Discussions with him roused my intellectual curiosity on cultural and intellectual history. He has also gone through Chapters V and VI and offered critical comments. I am grateful for his help, concern and encouragement.

My close friends Venkat, Sai Kumar, Mareswara Rao, Ankineedu and Chandra Mohan helped me morally and materially in several ways at different stages of this work. Whenever I was in a financial 'jam' or personal crisis they readily came to my rescue. What more can one ask from such good friends?
I would especially like to offer my thanks to 'Neelu' who made the maps and Kapil Kumar, Aditya and Mrudula Mukherjee, Bhagwan Josh, Sashi, Seeta, Brahmanand, V. Ramakrishna, Kamaraju, Ramana and Renu for their concern and encouragement.

My profound thanks are due to the staff of Tamil Nadu Archives, Madras and A.P. State Archives, Hyderabad; Nehru Memorial Museum & Library, Central Secretariat Library, Jawaharlal Nehru University Library and National Archives of India in Delhi and various local libraries in Andhra at Veetapalem, Rajahmundry, Kakinada, Vijayawada, Guntur, Visakhapatnam, Tenali and Nidubrolu.

My thanks are also due to J.S. Baweja and Om Prakash who typed the pre-final drafts of the thesis and tables. I am deeply indebted to my friends Harish and Naresh who produced the final draft on the Word Processor with meticulous care.

I am thankful to the Faculty of the Centre for Historical Studies, J.N.U. for granting me a two year fellowship and the Indian Council of Historical Research Authorities for a fellowship for over two years and a study grant of Rs.3,500/-.

I must express my gratitude to my mother and grand mother and Vijayalakshmi and Rahul for putting up with my long stay of absence from home in order to complete this thesis. However, none of the above friends and teachers are responsible for any errors that might have crept into this work. The sole responsibility for these is mine.
