ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

It is really an unexplainable pleasure to find out my long-cherished Ph. D thesis being ready for submission. The entire process of writing of the thesis would not have been possible without the untiring support provided by my teachers of the Department of Economics, Calcutta University, and my fellow colleagues of Katwa College where I am serving presently and members of my family. I do not want to miss this opportunity to record my sincere gratitude to all those who lend me their valuable time and sacrifice.

I am greatly indebted to my supervisor, Professor Soumyen Sikdar, Department of Economics, Calcutta University, who motivated me to develop research interest in this particular area. His constant guidance and support at every stage of the work helped me enormously to give concrete shape of the thesis. He gave several information regarding seminars, workshops, journals and books related to this area that helped me to know the area better. As I am a permanent employee of the Department of Economics, Katwa College, I could not attend him at his own available time. Instead, keeping in mind my inability, he used to make his own time adjustments in favour of my will.

I am also indebted to Professor Sarmila Banerjee, Department of Economics, Calcutta University, who introduced with my supervisor for such a daunting task. She helped me by prescribing several methodological changes to my thesis and also supplied so many information related to this area.

My sincere gratitudes are extended to all the members of the Ph. D seminar committee whose valuable suggestions helped me substantially in giving final shape to my thesis. Thanks also go to Professor Rabindranath Mukhopadhyay, Head, Department of Economics, Calcutta University, whose constant monitoring helped me enormously in meeting my dead line of submission.

I do not want to miss this opportunity to acknowledge the help of Dr. Soumyananda Dinda, Assistant Professor in Economics, F. R Fatepuria College, Beldanga and Dr. Kamal Ray, Associate Professor in Economics, Katwa College without whose co-operation and support this dissertation would not have seen the light of day. Thanks also go to the Principal of Katwa College who allowed me to use the departmental facilities even after the scheduled college hours.

Finally, I want to record my indebtedness to all of my family members who really inspired me for the work without which I would have been unable to do whatever little I have done. Of course, I alone am responsible for all the remaining shortcomings.
