ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This study is made possible largely due to the constant guidance and inspiration of two eminent scholars — who were successively my supervisors: Professor M.S. Rajan (now Professor Emeritus, the School of International Studies); and Professor K.P. Saksena, Professor of International Organization and, also, Honorary Director, Documentation-Information Centre for Human Rights Teaching and Research, School of International Studies, JNU.

Professor Rajan went through the first and second drafts of the thesis and offered his comments and suggestions. I take this opportunity to record and extend my indebtedness to the valuable guidance he provided.

Professor K.P. Saksena was largely responsible for suggesting ways and means of achieving qualitative improvement, and clarity of the chapters’ contents. Despite his busy schedule and numerous engagements, he was kind enough to spare his time in going through patiently and repeatedly all the chapters. I express my deep sense of gratitude for everything Prof. Saksena had done to see this study take the present shape.

I would also like to thank Professors M. Zuberi, K.P. Misra, T.T. Poulose — all of the Centre for International Politics, Organization and Disarmament Studies — for their interest in my work. I also thank my esteemed senior colleagues, Professor S.A.H. Bilgrami, Chairman, Department of Political Science, Aligarh Muslim University, Aligarh for his interest in the completion of this study.
Long discussions with reputed scholars both in India and abroad have sharpened my views on various aspects of the study. I take the pleasure in recalling the useful discussions I had with Dr. R. J. Vincent of the Department of International Relations, The University of Keele, the United Kingdom.

Thanks are also due to officials and staff of the Permanent Mission of India to the United Nations, New York, and the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, New Delhi, for their help in various ways.

My grateful thanks are due to the Director of Collegiate Education, Government of Karnataka for awarding doctoral fellowship and to JNU authorities for funding my field trip to UN Headquarters, New York, in 1984.

I acknowledge the assistance the staff of following libraries rendered to me:

The Libraries of Jawaharlal Nehru University, The Indian Council of World Affairs, The Indian Society of International Law, Faculty of Law, University of Delhi, Indian Law Institute, UN Information Centre, American Centre, all in New Delhi; Dag Hammarskjold Library of the United Nations, New York, New York Public Library and the University of London.

I also gratefully acknowledge the moral and other support extended to me by my late grandfather, parents and uncle.

Among many friends who extended their help at various stages of my work, mention of Dr. Yogesh K. Tyagi, Dr. C. S. R. Murthy, Mr. Hanumantha Chary, and Mr. N. B. V. R. Swamy (now at Columbia University, New York) needs to be made.
Grateful thanks are also due to Mr. Chand Sharma, who neatly and efficiently typed many drafts of this work. Needless to add, I am solely responsible for the views expressed and errors found in the script.

New Delhi

18 November 1986

ABDULRAHIM P. VIJAPUR