Preface

Although a number of books and articles have been written on the great poet of Bengal, Hazrat Sufi Fath Ali Waysi, yet there is a dearth of a concise as well as comprehensive work on him. This work aims at making the readers aware of the various aspects of his poetry as well as his personality as a moral preceptor.

It would not be justified on my part to claim that this work is absolutely free from mistakes and errors of judgments. But the readers are expected to humbly overlook such imperfections.

I take this opportunity to acknowledge my profound indebtedness to Professor I.K. Burke, Former Head, Deptt. of Arabic & Persian, Calcutta University. This research work was undertaken with his encouragement and has been completed under his guidance.

I also gratefully acknowledge the cooperation and guidance that I received from Professor Tanwir Ahmad, Controller of Examination, Aliah University, who offered valuable advice time and again. He has been a constant help and guided me throughout my present work.

I express my sincere gratitude to Professor Syed Akhtar Husain, Associate Professor, SLL & CS, JNU, who is always ready to extend a helping hand to the students. His invaluable support and suggestions has been a cornerstone for me in completing my thesis.

I am greatly thankful to Md. Feroze, Former Professor, Deptt. of Arabic & Persian, University of Calcutta, for his generous assistance and full cooperation.

I am thankful to Dr. Ahmad Ali, General Secretary, Waisi Memorial Association, for his co-opreation.

My blessings and thanks to my nephew Jawwad Ahmad, B.Com (Hons.), St. Xavier’s College, for his unwavering assistance throughout the present work. I am also indebted to my other family members for inspiring me to do such a work.

I also acknowledge the cooperation that I received from National Library, Asiatic Society, JNU, and Iran Society for providing me necessary assistance for my research work.
