TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction ........................................................................................................................................ 1

1. In Search of India: Locating India in Postcolonial Travel Narratives ................................. 23
   1.1. Travel Writing: An Overview .................................................................................................. 23
   1.2. From Kipling to Naipaul: Changing Visions of India in the Twentieth Century ............ 26
   1.3. The World Is What It Is: Writing Travel in the Era of Tourism ........................................ 34

2. The Narrator/Traveller as a “Subject of Difference”: Theories of Travel Writing .... 43
   2.1. From Root to Rhizome: Travel Writing, Nomad Thought and the Poetics of (In)difference ................................................................................................................. 43
   2.2. Routes of Passage: Conceptualizing “Space,” “Place” and “Site” in Naipaul’s India Trilogy .... 50
   2.3. The Genesis of Postcolonial Space in Naipaul’s India Trilogy ........................................... 64
   2.4. Naipaul’s Narrative Technique in the India Trilogy ............................................................. 68

3. History, Autobiography and Ethnography: Naipaul’s Use of the Travelogue .............. 82
   3.1. Travelling to Translate: The Travel Writer as an Ethnographic Commentator ............... 82
   3.2. Travel Writing and Indentured Labour: The “New Helots” of the Caribbean .............. 87
   3.3. Rites of Initiation: The Theme of “Arrival” in the Travelogues of V. S. Naipaul ......... 99
   3.4. Ideas of “Home” and “Abroad” in Naipaul’s Travel Writing .............................................. 106
   3.5. Means of Looking and Thinking: Naipaul’s Use of Images as Metaphors in An Area of Darkness and India: A Wounded Civilization .................................................................. 114

4. Discovering India in *An Area of Darkness .............................................................................. 122
   4.1. Naipaul’s Cave and Forster’s: The Rhetoric of Desire and Disappointment in An Area of Darkness .................................................................................................................. 122
   4.2. Narrating the Nation in An Area of Darkness .................................................................... 129
   4.3. Identity and Selfhood in An Area of Darkness ................................................................. 136
   4.4. The Rhetoric of Temporal Distancing in An Area of Darkness .................................... 142
   4.5. Time, Space and Alterity: Naipaul’s India and Rushdie’s—A Brief Comparative Study .... 150
5. Decoding India—India: A Wounded Civilization .......................................................... 154

5.1. Cities Visible but Unseen: Writing the Metropolis in India: A Wounded Civilization .......... 154
5.2. Decoding a Civilization: Yearning for le bon vieux temps de nos ancêtres ...................... 166
5.3. Colonial Mimicry in India: A Wounded Civilization .................................................. 170
5.4. The Travel Writer as a Tourist: “Negative Sightseeing” as a Modern Aesthetic ................. 176

6. Thus Spake the Subaltern—India: A Million Mutinies Now ......................................... 183

6.2. Orality and Subaltern History......................................................................................... 188
6.4. Stepping Out of History’s “Waiting Room”: The Question of Political Modernity and the Subaltern ......................................................................................................................... 199

7. Conclusion and Prospects for Further Research............................................................. 205

Selected Bibliography ..................................................................................................... 214

- Primary Reading.................................................................................................................. 214
- Secondary Reading............................................................................................................. 217

Appendix......................................................................................................................... 246