Acknowledgement

“Some Aspects Of Tamil And Bengali Culture — A Contrastive Study”, is the outcome of long four years of research in the Department of Tamil Studies, University of Calcutta from 2004-2008.

This research work attempts to undertake a “Some Aspects of Tamil and Bengali Culture — A Contrastive Study”. A study of such nature is expected to provide various information about the two major languages namely Bengali and Tamil.

The Thesis has been divided into seven chapters. It will be observed from the physical features of Indian topography that her North is surrounded by the ‘Himalaya range’ and ‘Garwal range’; in South there are the ‘Vindya ranges’ and the Indian Ocean; in the East the Bay of Bengal and the Arabian Sea in the West. There is Thar Desert in Rajasthan on the Northern plains. While Bengal is located in the East of the Indian Map, Tamilnadu is located in the South-East.

The successful completion of the research work would not have been possible without the active, unsparing and pain taking guidance of my superviser Dr. Sukla Chakrabarti, Reader and Head Department of Tamil Studies & Joint Coordinator of Comparative Indian Language & Literature in Calcutta University. I convey my heartfelt thanks to my respected teachers.

I extend my thanks to my maternal uncle Mr. Atindranath Bhattacharjee for his very valuable suggestions in writing the thesis.

Indian

I extend my thanks to my parents and my maternal uncle Mr. Dilip Chakraborty all those whose inspiration enthused me to take and complete this strenuous work.

I am grateful to my maternal uncle Mr. Chanchal Chakraborty for typing the thesis.