Acknowledgement

I wish to express my deep sense of gratitude and sincere thanks to:

Dr. B.R. Dwaraki, Reader in Rural Sociology and Head of the Department of Sociology, for his invaluable guidance and constant encouragement throughout my career at this Institute and in particular all through the different stages of this research endeavour.

Some times when I sit back in solitude and recall, I wonder whether without this friend, philosopher and guide I would have submitted the report at all. I thank him for the demand of formality only. Otherwise his role in guiding this research is beyond the words of expressing thanks.

I wish to place on record my sense of appreciation to the Vice Chancellor and the Registrar both of whom expressed deep concern about my research atmost everytime I met them in the last couple of years.

I am thankful to the entire KVK Staff who have stood by me all through this research study and have shown keen interest in what I was involved in.

This acknowledgement and the report itself would look apparently meaningless, if I do not thank all the villagers who have participated in the course of this research. After all the study itself is intended in their cause.
My thanks are due to the scientists of JCAR, because only in my capacity as C.T.O, I had an opportunity to design and organise farmers’ training programme in modern agricultural technologies. And again, only as C.T.O I had countless opportunities of interacting with farmers of a whole range of shades.

I wish to thank each and every one whom I have come across in the course of this study for I have been benefitted by them, sometime or the other even without their knowledge.
