Acknowledgments

In the course of writing a thesis one accumulates many debts, and I want to acknowledge the people who have helped me in so many different ways over the years.

First and foremost, my gratitude goes to my Supervisor, Dr. S.S. Deora, who brought great commitment and considerable conceptual talents and insights to this work. He dedicated himself to bring out the best out of me and without his ceaseless inspiration and unending support I would not have ventured into this difficult field. His contribution reminds me of a quote by Henry Adams “A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops”.

I offer deep thanks to Dr. Varun Sahni and Dr. C.S.R. Murthy (Chairperson, CIPOD/JNU), Dr. Amitabh Mattoo (Professor in CIPOD and currently Vice-Chancellor of Jammu University), Dr. Kanti P. Bajpai (former Professor of Disarmament at JNU and presently Headmaster of Dun School).

I am especially indebted to my friend, Satnam Singh (SDM, Mehrauli, New Delhi) for his untiring support, intellectual vigor, and willingness to take on extra responsibilities in ensuring the completion of the thesis. He made it possible and I always appreciate him.

Two persons were particularly important for me over a number of years. Ashis’s (Manager, Reserve Bank of India, Hyderabad) commitment, manifold talent and mastery have been essential. He truly ensured that this thesis would happen. Mrityunjay Singh (India T.V. Delhi) brought his high standards and his rigor as a historian and sleuth to the venture. Both have given a great deal of time and energy. I am very grateful to both of them.

For their considerable advice and careful readings, I am particularly grateful to Dr. Manish Srivastava (Senior Research Fellow, Indian Defense Strategic Analysis, New Delhi), Vijay Sinha (Under Secretary North Block, New Delhi), Ashutosh Kumar (Lecturer of Political Science, Patna), Rajendra Meena (Indian Railway Personnel Service), Dr. Rajan Kumar (Research Scholar, University of Kentucky, USA), and Dr. Shekhar Mallick (Research Associate, National Institute of Public Finance & Policy, New Delhi) all of whom were extremely gracious with their insights, experience, and time.

For their sagacious perspectives, I am indebted to Dr. Michael Von Hauff (Professor of International Economics, Universitat Kaiserslauern, Germany) for his unique grasp of business and public policy. I am especially appreciative to Dr. A. Rehman (Deputy Director, ICSSR), Shri Jit Singh (Secretary to Vice-Chancellor, JNU), Deepak, Haldhar Das, Rajnish, Anurag (IPS, Hyderabad), Shantanu Ghosh, Rakesh Tiwary, Mukesh Kataria, H.K. Meena (Assistant Manager, Central Bank of India, New Delhi), Kisan Pratap (Assistant Commissioner, Provident Fund, Faridabad), and Shekhar Vidyarthi (IAS), Dr. Raj Shekar Vandru (IAS) for their much needed help and support.

Also special appreciation and thanks to Professor G.K. Chadha (Vice-Chancellor of JNU and Agriculture Economist in JNU and former Chairman of Agriculture Costs and Price Commission, Government of India), who recommended my case to Professor Clay (Chancellor, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, USA), without which it would have not been possible to get.

I would also like to thank Dr. Bishnu Mahapatra (Programme Officer, Ford Foundation, New Delhi), who appointed me as a consultant to the Ford Foundation, which enabled me to visit MIT, USA. Thanks are also due to Dr. H.M. Tiwari (Assistant Professor, CHS, JNU), Dr. D.K. Lobiyal (Assistant Professor, Computer Sciences, JNU), Dr. Anand Kumar (Professor, Social Sciences, JNU), Dr. V.K. Jain (Professor, Environmental Science and Associate Dean of Students, JNU), Shri Avatar Singh Bhadana (Member of Parliament, Faridabad and General Secretary, AICC, New Delhi), Rajesh Kumar (MM, Metropolitan Magistrate, Delhi), Mrs. Vinita Tripathi (Director, Institute of International Education, New Delhi), Dr. Rajeev Sharma (Director, ISBWW, South Asia Zone, New Delhi), Dr. M.H Qureshi (Professor, Center for Study of Regional Development, JNU), Shri Sagar Mehr (Under Secretary, Chemicals & Fertilizers, Shastri Bhavan, Delhi), Shri Rajesh Arora, Shri, Satish Sharma and Lalit, Shri Fateh Singh
I must acknowledge the support from everybody at Dewey Library for Management and Social Science (Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, USA), Jawaharlal Nehru University Library, Institute of Defense and Strategic Analysis Library, Indian Institute of Foreign Trade and Ministry of Petroleum & Natural Gas, Delhi. Some people made special contributions. Professor Dr. Philip L. Clay, Chancellor MIT, USA and Miss Alexandra O'Neill went far beyond what might have been reasonably expected gave extraordinary care and understanding. I thank Catherine F. Friedman, Head of Dewey Library and Robert Kehner for extending their helping hands whenever needed.

I want to express my gratitude to my friends, Deep Chafe, Harjeet, and Pereira. They help me access Harvard University Library system, Widener Library, the Center for International Affairs and the Baker Library at the Harvard Business School. I also want to thank Aidan Alleyne (Manager, FleetBoston Financial Bank, Cambridge, USA) for his kind help.

In addition, I would like to record my appreciation to the following colleagues for their comments, readings, help, and dialogues over the years: Molly, Prachee, Prakruti, Pratyush, Dr Pushpita Das, Rakhi Sharma, Amit K., Sheela, Sunil Verma, (Scientist in Ministry of Mines, Rajasthan, Jaipur), Manzar, Pankaj Kumar (Indian Agriculture Research Institute Kerala), Vanadana, Santosh Kumar, Anil Kumar Roy, L.K. Shri Sampat Ram, my grandfather, the former Home Minister, Rajasthan, is the first person who showed me the path of education revealed. I do not find words to express my feelings about my uncle R.L. Verma who graciously stood by me in the absence of my father. I thank my sister, Beena and brother, Raju for being always encouraging over these years.

It has taken five long years to research and write this thesis. I am sure that a few persons might have escaped my acknowledgement. I ask their forbearance and request to accept my appreciation. As I look back over the names herein, I see that so many, so graciously have helped to reach at this stage and the countless obligations that I have acquired from them will not be easily forgotten. The work would not have been possible without their contribution, cooperation and interest. But I alone, in this venture, am responsible for all interpretations and judgments and, of course, for any errors.

I owe special thanks to Madam Dr. Rekha Laxman (Scientist, Central pollution Control Board, Delhi), and Sir Dr. R.K. Kale (Professor in Life Science and currently Chief Proctor, JNU, New Delhi). And my uncle, Shri Puran Chand (Former Joint Commissioner, KVS, New Delhi), Shri R.R. Prasad (Director, Indian Council for Social Science Research, New Delhi).

Last but not the least, I express my deepest gratitude to my mother. Without her affection, endurance and inspiration I could never have been able to complete this research.
