Acknowledgement

Today, on the verge of submitting my PhD thesis, I feel to convey my gratitude, regards and thanks to many people who has been a constant support and guiding force to me. It is very difficult to acknowledge such people whose unconditional encouragement made me active and complete my research paper even after so many years. To me, it would have been impossible to complete this work without their blessings and best wishes.

Nevertheless, I would like to express my utmost gratitude and respect to the Chairperson(s) of my Center and to my supervisor, Professor Atiya Habeeb Kidwai who, took the patience, and extended all her help to me to complete this thesis. I am immensely grateful to Professor M.D. Vemuri and Professor P. M. Kulkarni for helping me with their suggestions on statistical techniques. I am also grateful to other teachers of my Center for their valuable suggestions at various stages of my work. My special thanks to Mr. Vergheese for his help and support for computer related jobs.

I am grateful and convey all my regards to the librarians and officials of the following libraries who extended all their help at various point of time to enable me to work at ease: The National Library, Calcutta; Calcutta Municipal Corporation; Asiatic Society, Calcutta; Institute of Public Health and Hygiene, Calcutta; National Archive, New Delhi; Central Secretariat
Library, New Delhi; National Medical Library, New Delhi and over and above all the central library of Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi.

I am also grateful to “Indian Council of Historical Research”, New Delhi, for providing me with a research grant when I was really in need of monetary help.

I am very grateful to some of my friends and colleagues who had extended their unconditional help and support at times of acute and disappointing moments. I therefore, convey all my gratitude and thanks to Nilanjana Das, Urmimala Bagchi, Siddharta Dutta, Anil Roy, and Vinay Santuka.

Lastly, my regards go for my parents and all my family members, mainly my younger brother, who remained a constant source of inspiration during this difficult time.
