ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I express my deep gratitude to my supervisor, Dr. P. C. Jain, who, besides providing academic guidance, has always been a victim of my erratic, irregular and unscheduled meetings with him. Rarely did I manage to meet the deadline promised to him, but he never lost on his remarkable patience and encouraging attitude, treating me like his family member and letting me go with a piece of advice and a warning.

I am also deeply indebted to Dr. Girijesh Pant, who has always been encouraging, academically and morally. Besides other things, to a great extent I owe my field trip to Israel and upcoming Israeli government scholarship to him.

This thesis owes much to my old-time friend Arun Nautiyal, who over the years has developed a habit of being by my side during tough times, quite aware that I count only on him for certain tasks. Camping with me for over a month this time, his constant presence reminds me of my M. Phil. days when he had passed sleepless rainy nights with me, lending every possible help at every stage and until the last.

I am extremely grateful to the following persons for various reasons:

Professor Barry Rubin of Bar-Illan University (Israel) kept replying regularly to my mails and was very cooperative during my field trip. He provided useful discussion and guidance in Israel.

My friend Itai, an Israeli television journalist and my host there, was my main contact who provided every possible help, besides his parents' house to stay. His parents, Michael and Idi Anghel, were extremely sweet taking care of all my requirements in Tel Aviv. Ethirajan Anbarasan, my colleague at PTI, has incredible potential of managing my stay in Israel while being in Paris. He connected me to Itai.
My stay in Jerusalem would have been shorter by more than half but for Khursid Imran, a JNUite in Israel, who accommodated me for over a month in a country where accommodation is frightfully expensive.

Puneet, a diplomat with Indian embassy in Egypt, and his wife Ronnie (both JNUites) provided a luxurious stay on the bank of Nile at Cairo and took care of my every need there, besides never allowing me to eat outside.

M. K. Razdan, General Manager of PTI, encouraged me at a crucial stage to have the "best of both" — out of my academic pursuit as well as journalistic association with PTI.

Dr. Kumarswarmy, now an associate professor at JNU, was extremely helpful who, ensured that my library work at Hebrew University goes smooth.

Dinesh and Gabriela were ultimate assurance in Israel. From basic knowledge about the place, to library, to food, to stay, I could and did bank upon them anytime for anything.

Shaul Bibi, Sports editor with an Israeli daily and an expert on Oriental Jewish community, took out time from his busy schedule and had lengthy useful discussions with me.

Motti Inbari, who I met in Israel for the first time, kept his promise and kept sending me articles from there even after I came back.

Library staff at Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Givat Ram library and Tel Aviv library was pleasantly cooperative.

Indian Embassy staff at Tel Aviv, specially David and Sybil, provided every possible help. Ambassador Ranjan Mathai took time out from his busy schedule for useful discussions.

Souvesh and Rajesh Paswan have gone out of their way to type bibliography and making tables while Sushant Mishra provided a much peaceful place within JNU. Haju got me the rough draft of my thesis, of course free of cost.
My friends - Sunil, Renu, Shishir, Dipti, Siddharth, Sanjay Sharma and Sananwaya have always been concerned during this work.

Constant inquiries regarding the deadline and my progress from Tanveer, Manisha, Biplov Chaudhary, Ashok Dogra, Shohrab, Dinesh, Rahul, Arpit, Zafar, Kanchan, Nissim, Ajay, Irshad, Ikhlash, Avinash and Rona forced me to complete this work now, though I have been terribly late.

And finally, I thank Govind, whom I have troubled a number of times due to my lack of knowledge about software.

New Delhi

(Harsh Dobhal)