In this doctoral thesis some efficient algorithms for solving Linear and Non-linear programming problems have been developed. The new algorithms are compared with the existing algorithms by implementation and by choosing some typical test functions and optimization problems in order to demonstrate the greater efficiency of the new algorithms in terms of the number of function evaluations and the CPU-time.