AKNOWLEDGEMENT

I am deeply indebted to Prof. Ashok Mathur, under whose supervision, I had the privilege to complete this work. His dual role as a patient guide and inculcator of precision and logic, while allowing me the freedom to work out my idea in different lines, has contributed significantly to the quality of this work. As a teacher and economist he exerted the strongest influence on me to undertake and develop the present thesis.

I am thankful to Prof. G.K. Chadha for the generosity with which he allowed me the time to discuss various issues freely with him. I am also thankful to Prof. R.K. Sharma who went through the main framework of the present study, and helped me clarify and improve the thesis in several ways. Further clarification are due directly to the many helpful comments provided by Prof. V.N. Pandit of Delhi School of Economics, Prof. C.P. Chandrasekhar and Prof. P. Patnaik of J.N.U., Dr. N. Mohanty of National Institute of Educational Planning and Administration, and Dr. S. Sinha of Jamia Millia Islamia. My thanks are also due to Dr. S.C. Sharma, Principal, Ram Lal Anand College, (Eve.), Delhi University, for the encouragement he provided to complete this work.
Throughout the course of my research my parents extended every sort of help and encouragement, with love and pride, to sustain the work. To them, I owe a most profound debt. My wife, Sarabjit Padhi, took time off from her already loaded schedule to help me in every possible way. I owe her my sincerest thanks also for putting up with stress and strains in these years and for providing me the necessary moral support.

My thanks are due to the library staff members of J.N.U., Ratan Tata, NCEAR, Cement Manufacturing Association, and NIPFP for the help provided in collection of materials. My thanks are also due to Mr. Satyender Kumar, computer programmer, computer centre, CSRD, for being extremely helpful in helping me with the softwares to process the data.

I am thankful to U.G.C. for the S.R.F. which facilitated the work to a great extent.

Finally, I must thank Arkesh Yadav, Dharmender Dabas, and P. Jose for their painstaking efforts in typing the manuscript. I am also grateful to Mr. Partha Sarathi Guha who helped me to get through the task in the final stage.
