ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

When I started to think about the topic, in my opinion, since the collapse of USSR this was the only area where relation existed and still do. So aspired to work on the same. But as I started my work, it became a challenging task for me to collect the sources. Since not a single book is available on this topic which exclusively deals with the defence cooperation between these two countries. The books which are available in edited form throw very little light on this issue. Primary sources are contradicting each others figure and data. Articles from very few Journals have gone to the in-depth analysis of defence relations.

Thus it became a daunting task for me to complete this research work without field trip. But constant support, guidance, suggestion and close observation of my guide, made it easy for me to complete this work. So my foremost thanks go to my generous supervisor, Dr. Gulshan Sachdeva. I have a deep sense of gratitude for him because without his constant encouragement and guidance this work would have been any other one line thought. His much valued advice and support would remain be a part of my life.

I am thankful to the library staff of JNU, IDSA, Teen Murti, Centre for Policy Research, British Council, Indian Council of Social Science, Indian Council of Historical Research, Indian Institute of Foreign Trade and American Central library for their kind help and cooperation.
