References
6. REFERENCES

ADAMS, J.D. and NILAN, R.A., 1958, After effects of ionising radiations in barley. II Modification by storage of X-irradiated seeds in different concentrations of oxygen. Radiation Research, 8, 111-122.

AFZAL, S.M.J. and KESAVAN, P.C., 1977, Effect of varying concentrations of caffeine and ascorbic acid on the radiosensitivity of barley seeds irradiated in oxygenated or oxygen-free hydration media at 25°C and 37°C. Environmental and Experimental Botany, 17, 129-133.

CERVIGNI, T., CASERTA, G. and BASSANELLI, C., 1968, Preliminary investigations on thermoluminescence and radiosensitivity in seeds. Radiation Botany, 8, 71-79.

CONGER, A.D., 1961, Biological after effects and long-lived radicals in irradiated seeds. Journal of Cellular and Comparative Physiology, 58, (Suppl. 1), 27-32.

GORDY, W. and SHIELDS, H., 1958, Radiation Research, 9, 611.

*GUSTAFSON, A., 1937, Mutation in agriculture plants, Hereditas, 33, 1-100.

80

LETT, J.T. and ALEXANDER, P., 1961, Crosslinking and degradation of deoxyribonucleic acid gels with varying water contents when irradiated with electrons. Radical Research, 15, 159-173.

O’NEILL, P. and FIELDEN, M., 1993, Primary free radical processes in DNA. Advances in Radiation Biology, 17, 53-120.

WOLFF, B. and HANLON, S., 1975, Structural transitions of deoxyribonucleic acid in aqueous electrolyte solutions. II. The role of hydration. Biochemistry, 14, 1661-1670.

* ORIGINAL NOT SEEN.