ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

My inspiration for this research was gathered while working in the Project- ‘Man and Forests’ among the indigenous people of Orissa, during 1994-95. During that period I was deeply impressed by the rich indigenous traditions and useful wisdom of these people that helped them maintaining a self-sustained life, since ages, despite staying far away from the amenities of mainstream world. Many valuable ideas and insights were accumulated from the life of these innocent and trustworthy adivasis of Orissa, which I thought of to use in a further research venture. However, the transformation of those ideas into this present form was a long and arduous one. Several persons have contributed generously into realizing this dream and making this endeavour successful. In this prolific moment, I wish to express my heartfelt gratitude to all the persons who helped to get this thesis in the present shape.

Prof. K.L. Sharma, my supervisor, fomented my ideas and equipped me with the knowledge and skills to carry out this doctoral work successfully. In spite of his exceptionally tiring responsibility he has gone through my chapters and made valuable suggestions. His never-ending support and benevolent care make me to overcome the anxiety and come to this stage. I am extremely grateful to him. I am highly thankful to Dr. S.S. Jodhka, for his timely support and inspiration to this work. Although he was assigned my supervisor while the thesis was nearing completion, his useful inputs and help at a critical juncture are highly appreciated.

I am thankful to Prof. Anand Kumar the Chairperson of our centre for his cooperation in all necessary situations. I am missing our humble teacher Prof. Venugopal, who developed very clear anthropological understanding within me, helped me in this study. I offer my prayer for his long life.

I extend my sincere gratitude to Dr. Klaus Seeland of Swiss Federal Institute of Technology, Zurich and Prof. R. F. Ellen, Kent College, Canterbury, who have stimulated me through their conceptual feedback and personal communication from far away places.
I am thankful to Prof. M.D. Vemuri for his generous aid by allowing me to work in his personal computer at the time of urgent need. I am also thankful to Prof. R.K. Sharma, CSRD, for his moral boost to carry forward the work and complete it in time.

I am thankful to Jamesh, Laxman, Malati, Saliman, Mukundabhai, Sarata and Family, Achyutabhai (SC&STRTI), Laxmi and Pasita and many other Saora friends who have provided me accommodation and assistance in the fieldwork.

My honest gratitude to Samirbhai, who has been instrumental in imbibing courage, confidence and determination at the cost of his precious time, wealth and even his share of food. Badalbhai, Debabhai, Ramabhai, Bapubhai and Chakarapani have shared their well wishes and charity during the tough moments of my life. I owe my gratitude to them.

I genuinely grateful to Kaushik, a true caravan behind me, who stood in each and every moment of need and anxiety since the plan of my study to the final point. His contribution for this work in difficult movements is incalculable. Gupteswar, Prasant, Bikash, Yogesh, Songhita, Gajanan, Harindra and Arvind have contributed to this work handsomely at their most possible capacity. I am thankful for their generosity and cooperation in this crucial moment of need. Cooperation and well wishes flow from many more persons among them are Ranasab, Haresh, Samba, Sadanand, Ramabhai, Sartik, Tila, Babulal, Bishnu, Sikhar, Jitu, Bibhuti, Ravi, Nrupendra, Gautam, Bata, Narana, Bobby, Luna, Bunu, Sanjeer, Babulal, Bishnu, Sarbeswar and Millan, for whom this work became achievable. I am very much thankful to all of them and sincerely admiring their concern in this endeavor.

Mr. Girija Bhusan Patnaik, of The Universe and the Director of the project: Man and Forests, who had given me an opportunity to work and come closer to this indigenous Hill Saoras, indeed motivated me with adequate inspiration for this study. Especially, the insights of my team mate Papunani and Mihirbhai made me to learn many vital aspects of the Saora life, the importance of which is realized in this research.

I am thankful to the staff of Central Library; JNU, SC&STRTI Library Bhubaneshwar, Faculty of Science Library, DU, and ISI Library, Lodhi Road, for their cooperation in providing useful literature. I also thank all the people of my centre with whom I shared memorable times and get cooperation without any problem.
I am thankful to ICSSR for awarding me a Short-Term Fellowship to complete my work smoothly.

I am honestly grateful to my family members; especially my parents who stood by me all along and bear the pain, without their blessing the work could have been unworkable.

Though help flows from various quarters the errors and omissions are mine alone.
