ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The inspiration, encouragement and guidance came from Prof. R.C. Sharma, my supervisor and I could complete my doctoral dissertation due to his constant and painstaking interest. I have to thank his family members for bearing with my frequent intrusion, I express my sincere thanks to the Centre for International Politics, Organisation and Disarmament, School of International Studies for giving a chance to do this study.

Since my childhood, my father Shri Kalpanath Rai, M.P.(Lok Sabha) has been a great source of inspiration to me. He saw to it that I do not waiver from the path on account of trials and tribulations, grief and happiness and hope and despair. He stood behind me, overtly or covertly, as a real source of inspiration for accomplishing this work. This particular work of mine is seeing the light of the day only because of him. I sincerely and solemnly dedicate this work to him. I cannot forget my in-laws who always co-operated and encouraged me to complete my doctoral thesis. I specially recognise the help of Ram Pravesh, during my preparation of the study.

Last but not the least, my husband Mukti, my children Mohit, Neha and Shree, they were all too keen to see me finishing this research study. They gave me enormous support to complete this work. I owe so much to them.

Many people at various stages have contributed for the successful completion of this study. If I name them it will become a long list. But I am very much thankful to each one of them. My sincere thanks are due to various Institutes and Universities, which I have visited to collect information on my research topic, in Delhi and outside.
