

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This thesis was my dream. There are people in this world, some of them so wonderful that made my dream become a successful. No success in this world is a solo effort. From the person who guides me to the shopkeeper who binds my thesis, everyone has a role. I would like to thank all of them and in particular:

I wish to acknowledge God, who, continues to look after me despite my flaws and for His immense love and blessings.

My supervisor Dr. Lucy Zehol—mentor, guru and guide, who has been with me all these years and who critically reviews my work and ensures that it is fit for the award of the degrees of Doctor of Philosophy in Anthropology. I am immensely grateful for her encouragement, patience and support, for giving full attention at all stages of the research. I owe all my success and motivation to her. I am no less grateful to her mother, Thinengla Vashum (Mrs. A.Thomas) for her relentless support and the intellectually inspiring sessions I have had with her occasionally.

Head of Department for his critical feedback, wonderful suggestions, insightful comments, depth of understanding and calm personality have been invaluable assets for me throughout.

I am also grateful to my respected teachers of the department of Anthropology, North Eastern Hill University, for their ever encouraging and supportive attitude.

I express my deep sense of gratefulness to the Indian Council of Social Science Research (ICSSR-NERC) and to Ministry of Social Justice, Tribal, Government of India for extending financial assistance.

I cannot just forget the timely kindness of Dr. C.J Thomas, director of ICSSR-NERC, who, among his many kinds gestured to me, also allowed me to use his books for my work, has been helpful in many ways and I now acknowledge his kindness.

I cannot adequately express my gratitude to the people of Ukhrul for their corporation and hospitality throughout my fieldwork. Special thanks to my key informants, (L) Ngalashingai, C.T Shangam, Thinengla Vashum (Mrs. A. Thomas), S. Jangkui, Stephan Angkang, Dharma Raleng, Kanmila Raleng, E. Kahaosan, Ramkathing Ramsan, Benjamin Kashung, Ruichumshai Rumthao, and Ramkhayei Kashung who showed interest in my research work and provided me with rich information. Without their help this thesis would not have been possible.

To Mr. Letminthang Khongsai, I owe a special debt of gratitude for formatting my thesis.

My family, which continues to support me in all my ventures. I thank with special fervor to my parents, who, for their endless love and support. Hadn't they encouraged me all the way, I would have given this up a long time ago. They also accompanied me to the field and stayed with me in the process, and handled me and my sometimes out-of-control emotions so well.

I am grateful, too, to my friends for rendering me various forms of help.

Occasional helps rendered by the non-teaching staffs, Anthropology Department, NEHU, are worth a mention here.

Finally, I remain ever grateful to all those who have contributed to my research work directly or indirectly.
