Acknowledgements:

During the course of my work I received help from different quarters. Now the time has come for me to express sincerest thanks for all the help that I had received from them. Directly or indirectly, all are responsible for the completion of this thesis but for whose help this would not have possible.

I deem it my privilege to thank my research supervisor Prof. P. Venkata Rao for the continued cooperation and untiring effort by him to bring this work to fruition. His critical insights and I may say so, elliptical suggestions have supplied the foundations of the present work. He has been a continuous source of inspiration and encouragement that was at times needed, and patiently supervised the work till its destiny. I will look back on my association with Prof. Rao during my MA, M.phil, and Ph.D dissertation, with a sense of pride and privilege.

This is also an occasion to thank Prof. Raghava Rao and Prof. K.K. Mishra for their unstinted support, cooperation and warmth. My teachers Dr. R. Siva prasad, Dr. BV Sharma, who had taught me, placed me in a position to critically look at things, analyse them and made me feel at home in anthropology.

I am extremely grateful to Dr. Narendra Bondla, Dr. Tarakan, Dr. Suvvada sreenivas, Dr. P.H Mohamad and Dr. Aneel babu J for their cooperation and constructive suggestions which have broadened my knowledge on the subject.

I am very thankful to all my senior and junior researchers, classmates and friends on and off the campus that were of help. I specially thank Panchu, Shaji, Senthil, Hemu, Somdev, Apratim for their timely and invaluable help.

I am greatly indebted to the villagers of Khangshim and Minou who had been a constant source of help throughout my field work. I am indebted for the hospitality and many a kindness shown to me during fieldwork. In this regard, I fail my duty if I do not acknowledge the timely help that I had received from Koshang uncle and Peter and other key informants in the villages.
I owe a great deal to Prof. R.P. Singh, Dr. Kamkhengthang, Dr. MC Arun, Samungou, and Ajitdar for their valuable suggestions.

Above all, my friend Anil has always been constant source of inspiration and encouragement all through my stay in the University. Raj has helped me ungrudgingly during the times of need. BK Srenivas, Bhaskar, Bheem, Manichandan, Nandu have always provided their companionship and emotional support all through the work.

I thank to my beloved brothers Tajou Raghu, Suresh, Dinesh, Kennedy, Kumarjit, Subhash, Sanjay, Jhonstone, Prem for being source of inspiration and their concern to complete the dissertation.

I am obliged to my parents who designed my disposition, from the cradle, to this stage who is responsible for the state of mind. My brothers, sisters, and sister-in-law had always been a source of encouragement. My Uncles, Aunts and cousins helped in accomplishing this academic endeavor.

I also express my thanks to Shekhar, Adinarayan, Ashok, Niranjan for their CO-operation during my stay in Department of Anthropology,

I extend my heart felt thanks for the library staff IGM, NIRD, MU, DDTBC (research wing library) and other libraries.

Last but not the least my sincere thanks to go to well wishes and friends who have helped me in and out of my work at different phases. Listing them would be mountainous task, but their help was invaluable during the work.
