ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Verbal expressions would be limiting for expressing my sincere gratitude to Dr. Lalji Singh, my thesis supervisor, in whose laboratory I had the first peek at the actual life of research. Impressed by the man and his work, it was quite simple to aspire for a place in his laboratory and besides having this desire fulfilled was fortunate to have his continuous support and encouragement throughout the course of my work. His uncompromising attitude towards the quality of research will always serve as a guiding light for me. Working with him has been an extremely rewarding experience, especially during microscopy, for his eyes would always spot something that others would miss. Lalji has also been responsible for making me overcome the common fear of snakes and to be actually quite fond of them.

Research at CCMB is truly a pleasure and this fact owes itself to the unparalleled work atmosphere and culture that has been nurtured by Dr. P. M. Bhargava, Prof. A. Sharat Chandra and Prof. D. Balasubramanian.

The concern shown by Drs. Dipankar Chatterji and Kshitish Majumdar requires a special mention, as their friendly persistence have always brought unapproachable targets within tangible reach. Shashi provided access to microscopes, and an Apple.

CCMB is truly a home away from home, a family that makes the long duration of the research course not just bearable but enjoyable. The fondness only increases over the years. The solution to success in research lies in ability to devise problems and this would have been actually difficult had I not the closeness of a great number of problem solvers. Subbalakshmi and Krishnakumari have been extremely helpful during protein purification. Jayaraman from the animal house reduces the tears when one sees him mitigate pains of animals during handling, especially during retroorbital bleeding. It’s a great pleasure being in the dark when you are in the company of the people from photography, Ramesh, Rehman and Khalid and everyone else there made me see the light in this statement. Prakash has made multiple xerox copies of this experience in what may almost seem a blink. Colleagues from stores (chemical and general) and administration had always seen that the requirements for various things during the course of this work never had to wait.

Working on W10 II/3rd floor, has always been a delightful experience. Suryanarayana Rao had perfect solutions for all tasks and Ashok and Ushwanadham always kept the place buoyant. The warmth and support of all the colleagues has been responsible for making the stay here a memorable one. Shirly, Sanjay, Mala, Radha, Seema, Thangaraj, Rachel, Deepa, Srikanth, Milind, Nasseer, Ravinder, Ramesh, Bala, Pandian, Sukanya, Lavanya, Jagan have made the workplace seem unlike one.

Rajyashri, Raghavendra and their homes made me forget the feeling of being away from one.

Formal acknowledgement of friends whose influence extends into much larger sphere of life is an exceedingly difficult task and for avoiding litany, I would just mention Manna, Swamy, Sushil, Amit, Girish, Murali, Patil, Tharun, Sridhar, Chota, Asha, Girija, Nambi, Anil, Srikanth, Arvind, Siddartha, Ritu, Priscilla, Trupta, Shankar, Milind, Chandrika, Sanjeev, Shyam, D. Sridhar, Bow, Vinisha, Krishnaveni.

The patient support of my family is an unpayable debt.

The hanumantine task of putting a thesis in shape has always been regarded a superhuman task by me and it would not have been possible unless a subset of the above had contributed significant portions of their sleep towards this.

The CSIR is gratefully acknowledged for financial support.
