ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This research study has been undertaken by me for the Ph.D. degree. Working through it has not been easy, but it has always been exciting and interesting, and an enormous learning experience.

I am grateful to Dr. Neera Desai, Professor of Sociology, for her incisive guidance, suggestions and encouragement throughout my research, and consider myself fortunate to have had the benefit of her academic brilliance and vast experience in this field of work.

To all the busy women executives in the sample for this study, and to those husbands, who willingly cooperated with me, sparing their valuable time, to discuss issues concerning their work and family life, my sincere thanks. This study would not have been possible without them.

I owe a debt of gratitude to Ms. Yvonne Horner who cheerfully undertook the onerous task of deciphering my handwriting and typing the draft and final copies of my thesis, never complaining about the long hours she had to put in or the minor irritants of last minute changes. Thank you, Yvonne.

My thanks also to the staff of the library of S.N.D.T. Women's University at Churchgate, for their cooperation and helpfulness at all times; and to Ms. Sunanda Gunde, Librarian at the Tata Institute of Social Sciences, Deonar, for permitting me to use the library facility there.

Last, but not the least, my thanks also to all the members of my family and good friends for their help, support and encouragement and for putting up with me during the really busy and trying times while getting this research completed.
