ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is almost seven years since I arrived at JNU. Since then, a good number of people have helped me and influenced me. Without them, I would not have been able to produce this dissertation. I cannot acknowledge all my debts here but hope to make some progress in that direction.

First and foremost, I would like to thank Manmohan Agarwal. For three to four years he has been my supervisor, my mentor and guardian. His invaluable guidance, thoughtful insights, constructive criticisms and encouragement have shown me the path of success.

Second, John Whalley. For the last couple of years he has been my advisor, employer and co-author. Without his invaluable support and guidance I would not have been able to produce this dissertation in the shape what is today. I enjoyed his graduate courses on Numerical Simulation, Optimization and Equilibrium Analysis (396A) and Global Trading System (312B) at the University of Western Ontario. I express my sincere thanks and gratitude to him.

Third, I must thank Ashok Guha who considered my admission at the JNU in the winter semester as I was too late to register for the monsoon semester for which I was offered admission initially. I have been benefited from discussions with and the graduate courses of Ashok Guha, Sandwip K. Das, Manmohan Agarwal, Alokesh Barua and Manoj Pant. My sincere thanks to all of them.

During my visit to the University of Western Ontario as a Shastri Indo-Canadian Doctoral Fellow, apart from John Whalley my interaction with Jim Davies, Ron Wonnacott, Ig Horstmann, Srihari Govindan, Ake Blomqvist, Leo Michellis and Randall Wigle had been very helpful. I have been benefited from the comments from the participants at the Trade and Development Workshop at the Western Ontario. I express my sincere thanks and gratitude to all of them. Debra Merrifield arranged for all the infrastructural facilities and made the official formalities very smooth. I feel my indebtedness to her and the Western as a whole for providing me with all the facilities.

I express my sincere thanks and gratitude to Robert Stern, Alan Deardorff and Alan Fox at the University of Michigan for providing me some data from the Michigan Model of World Trade and Production Data Base which helped me at the initial stages of my studies.

I am grateful to Indian Council of Social Science Research (ICSSR) and Shastri Indo-Canadian Institute for providing me with the Doctoral Fellowships and John Whalley at the University of Western Ontario for supporting my research financially for a long time.

I am grateful to M. Govinda Rao, Atul Sarma, R. Radhakrishan, Arindam Das-Gupta, Amresh Bagchi, Raja J. Chelliah, Tapas Sen and Hiranya Mukhopadhyay for motivating me while I was at the National Institute of Public Finance and Policy. My friends in the computer division particularly Sathis Kamath and Navin K. Singh helped in any problem with computer. My sincere thanks and gratitude to them.

My teachers particularly Nirmalendu Nath, Atish Mukherjee and Ashutosh Chandra motivated me towards the Ph.D. programme at JNU. They have inspired me at every stage of my student life. I express my since thanks and gratitude to them.

My thanks are due to all my friends and seniors who have been my constant source of inspiration, particularly Biswajit Dhar, Kavita Rao, Sanjeeb Pohit, Pradip Biswas, Kishaloy Banerjee, Byasdev Das Gupta, Krishnendu Ghosh Dastidar, Saurabh Bandyopadhyay, Nilkamal Mandal and Dipankar Sengupta.

I have been benefited from National Institute of Public Finance Library and Indian Statistical Institute Libraries in India and Weldon Library and Economics Reference Centre Library at the Western in Canada. I might mention that staffs at the Weldon Library Ann Morris, Maureen Ryan and John Tyndall and Jane at the Economics Reference Centre were very helpful. People in the Social Science Computing Laboratory particularly Vincent Gary, Ali Hammoud, Eric, Peter, Kauffman and Jane McAndrew were very friendly and solved any computer related problem in a smiling face as and when approached to. I express my sincere thanks and gratitude to all of them.

Several people helped and inspired me in London, Ontario, particularly Mr. and Mrs. Prabir Gupta (Kaku and Kakima), Mr. and Mrs. Piyus Kanti Lala. They made my life so easy here that I never felt like I am thousands miles away from my native place. I take the opportunity to convey my thanks and gratitude to all of them. Thanks are due to all my friends here, particularly, Dipanjan, Krishna, Aled Iorwerth, Aydemir Abdurrahman, Madeleine, Venu, Ramachandra Reddy, Godhuli and Sanjoy who had been constant source of inspiration.

In my family, my mother, elder brother Biswanath Ghosh elder sister Jayashree Ghosh my younger brother Prasanna and other sisters Arati and Bharati had been the constant source of inspiration. My elder brother took all the responsibilities on his shoulder and made me free from all the family responsibilities. My thanks and regards to all of them.
